FIGHT FOR COLLINS REWARD

Nine Claim $3,000 Offered for Finding of New Bedford Boy's Body

New Bedford, Jan. 10.—The body of James F. Collins, Jr., sixteen years old, son of Alderman Collins of this city, who has been missing since December 18, was found in Turner's Pond, Plainville, two hundred feet from the spot where his shotgun, cartridge belt, cap and mittens were picked up December 28.

Arthur Comeau and Jan Janowski came across the body under a thin coating of ice in two feet of water a few yards from the shore.

That the lad was murdered there now remains little doubt, for after the finding of the hunting outfit a thorough and persistent search had been made of that part of the lake where the corpse was found, and the indications are that the body was placed there since the police stopped blasting the ice on the pond four days ago.

Medical examiner Daniel F. O'Brien, who is here performing an autopsy, says he will not make known the manner of the youngster's death until after a more thorough examination of the corpse, than he has thus far had time to make. No marks of violence are visible upon the body, however.

Rewards aggregating nearly $3,000 for the recovery of the body had been offered by the boy's father, the city council and wealthy citizens. A bitter dispute has already arisen over the right to claim the money, for after Comeau and Janowski discovered the corpse they ran to telephone the police and while they were gone seven men, attracted by their show of excitement, removed the body from the water and said they would claim the reward.

Comeau and Janowski had been skating on another part of the pond and saw the corpse through the thin ice while skirting the edge of the lake on the way back to the road.

HELD UP BY TWO MEN IN ROXBURY

Two religious emblems, $20 in cash, a gold watch and a penknife were taken from Emil Dallemolle of No. 35 Maywood street, Roxbury, by two men who followed him from a street car near Blue Hill avenue and Maywood street. Dallemolle said the tow men overpowered him. He was able to furnish only a meager description of the robbers.

SNOW OR RAIN DUE IN BOSTON TONIGHT

Snow or rain is predicted for Boston late tonight by Forecaster Smith. Storm disturbances along the Southern Atlantic coast are moving rapidly in a northeasterly direction. The Weather Bureau at Washington has ordered storm signals placed along the Atlantic from Cape May to Eastport, Me.

HOUSE PROBE OF BOSTON DOCK CHARGES IS ASKED

Representative Thomas Joyce filed a bill in the House today providing for an investigation of charges that the British government was allowed storage privileges at Commonwealth docks at a third of the regular rates and to the exclusion of American commerce. The bill was drafted by former Mayor Curley.

ANOTHER DROP IN CRUDE OIL PRICE

Pittsburg, Jan. 10.—The Joseph Seep Agency, purchasers for the Standard Oil Company, announced today the reduction in price of Corning grade of crude oil from $4 to $3.75. This follows a reduction in price of half a dozen of the best grades, including Penn crude, on Saturday.

WOOLEN MILLS TO REOPEN

Report Wages Will Bt Cut 22½ Per Cent. by American Company

Announcement that the fifty-four mills operated by the American Woolen Company will resume work at once is expected today or tomorrow, according to information received in Boston today.

It is also reported that the officials of the company will at the same time announce a wage reduction of 22½ per cent., following the example set by other mills throughout New England.

More than 45,000 employes, with their 200,000 dependents, will be immediately affected by the proposed wage cut, as well as by the resumption of work in the mills which have been closed down for months.

The American Woolen Company was the first of the big textile companies to begin curtailing operations on a big scale. It closed all its mills in New England and New York July 1 last.

In a recent statement to the company's employes, William M. Wood, president, laid the blame for the business depression which had forced the curtailment of the mills, to the advice given the public by government officials to stop buying as far as possible.

It is believed that the statement accompanying the announcement of the wage cut will explain that the company has taken this step in order to meet the competition of other mills, which, following the policy adopted by the New England Manufacturers' Association, have reduced wages 22½ per cent.

The American Woolen Company is capitalized at $60,000,000.

EAST BOSTON WIFE GONE, AID OF POLICE ASKED

Mrs. Josephine Sias, 21 years old and pretty, has been missing from her home at No. 74 Prescott street, East Boston, since November 29. The East Boston police were asked today to take up the search for her. She is five feet in height, weighs 110 pounds, has blue eyes, light brown hair and light complexion. She wore black shoes, stockings, coat and dress and a small round hat. Mrs. Sias had on her fingers a bloodston ring and a wedding band.

MYSTIC, CT., SHIPYARD EMPLOYES LAID OFF

New London, Ct., Jan. 10.—Employes of the Pendleton Shipyard at Mystic have been laid off indefinitely today, following their refusal to accept a wage cut of twenty to twenty-five cents an hour. The suspension is to take effect immediately, although a large amount of work remains unfinished.

Miss Puffer Sued by Negro in Love Case

Arthur Garfield (Honey) Hazzard, negro choreman, today filed suit in the Cambridge Superior Civil Court against Miss Mabel Emelin Puffer of Ayer, now in the State Hospital for the insane, asking $30,000 damages to his affections through her refusal to marry him.

Hazzard claims in his suit that on March 1 1919, Miss Puffer, a middle-aged spinster, promised to become his bride, and that he has been and is still more than willing to complete his share in what he declares was a mutual compact, but that she has failed to do her part

The affairs of Miss Puffer, who is a wealthy woman of Ayer, atracted much attention about a year ago when the couple were arrested in Concord, N. H., just as they were on the point of being married.

In court Miss Puffer made the assertion that through Hazzard she was but showing her love for a mythical individual she called Charles R. McGee, a white man.

Hazzard later declared that this was untrue, and that he had won the affection of Miss Puffer by his singing of sentimental ballads.

The negro later was arrested, charged with stealing $6,000 from ... spinster. This charge was dismissed, but he was forced to refund the money he had obtained from the woman, amounting to $5,800.

BABY BOY FOUND IN DOORWAY

Day-Old Infant Rescued by Milkman in Exclusive State House Section

That part of Chestnut street, Beacon Hill, which is still an "exclusive residential section," was stirred today by the announcement that a day-old boy had been found in the doorway at No. 18.

The infant was found by Clarence Clarence Hooey, a driver for the Upland Milk Company, in the small hours when the residents of that district were wrapped pin slumber.

The baby had been placed in a paper bag and was swathed in a black waist and two pieces of a woman's underclothing.

The child was taken to the Haymarket Relief Hospital, where the physicians hoped to save its life.

The house where the baby was found is the property of Arthur Winslow, mining engineer of No. 131 State street, who is connected with a number of corporations and is a trustee for the Free Hospital for Women.

Mr. Winslow and his family are away, however, the house being occupied during the Winter by Henry Whitman and family. Mr. Whitman's housekeeper told the Boston American that no one in the house had any knowledge of the finding of the child. She said that all had retired about 10 o'clock Sunday night.

At 7:30 today, when a servant went to the door to get the papers, there were no evidences that a baby boy had lately reposed there. They were not notified of the discovery, the housekeeper said.

STEAMFITTER DYING AFTER 10-FOOT PLUNGE

Providence, Jan. 10.—Philip Dwyer, twenty-eight years old, of No. 839 Atwells avenue, was probably fatally injured when he fell from a ladder in the building at No. 101 Sabin street. He is employed there as a steamfitter and while working on pipes lost his balance and fell, striking his head on the cement floor ten feet below. At St. Joseph's Hospital it was found he had sustained a concussion of the brain and probably a fracture of the skull.

FIVE AUTO CARS HELD UP; BANDITS GET $2,000

Elizabeth, N. J., Jan. 10.—Five well-dressed bandits early today held up five motor cars, robbed their occupants of nearly $2,000, defeated the police of three nearby towns in running pistol fights, and got away in their own car. Finding that they adh robbed a legless World War veteran the hold-up men apologized and returned $50 to him.

PLANS TO UNTIE METHUEN KNOT

Officials of De Facto City Confer With Governor and Tell Proposed Schemes

A delegation of officials of the de facto city of Methuen called upon Governor Cox today with a proposition which they said would straighten out the affairs of that community.

They declared their first purpose was to bring order out of the chaos which resulted when it was found that the act by which Methuen became a city was unconstitutional.

Mayor Samuel Rushton headed the delegation. Others on the committee were Judge A. G. Pierce, City Solicitor Charles A. Clifford, Representative W. L. Stedman, Representative Robert Dow, ex-Selectman Henry Dean and Senator Fred Butler, the latter from Lawrence.

Their proposal, which was taken under advisement, was as follows:

1—Have the Legislature repeal the unconstitutional act by which Methuen was made a city.

2—Validate the acts of the city government while city officials thought Methuen was legally a municipality.

3—A special town meeting, for the purpose of electing a new town government and at the same time giving the people a chance to decide whether or not they wished to live under the town or city plan.

Representative Stedman for the delegation said the people of Methuen wanted the final word in their own affairs.

He stated he understood that the Governor and Attorney-General Allen were in conference on the matter and he wished them to hear from the citizens of the de facto city.

Mr. Stedman and the other members of the committee declared that there were no persons in Methuen inclined to take advantage of the chaotic state of affairs in that community.

They said they did not anticipate lawsuits over the payment of taxes or officials' salaries, such as might be bright under the letter of the law.

The call for the special town meeting has already been issued. It will be held January 22.

The make-up of the committee which waited upon Governor Cox today was significant of the desire of all the people of Methuen to "find out where they are at."

Former Selectman Dean is generally rated as hostile to the city charter idea while others of the committee are in favor of it.

"Our first purpose is to decide where we stand" said Representative Stedman. "After that foes and friends of the city idea may begin to fight again."

CIGARETTE IN BABY CARRIAGE STARTS FIRE

A lighted cigarette in a baby carriage is believed to have been the cause of a fire at the three-story, wooden residence, No. 257 Highland avenue, Somerville. Patrolman Samuel Burns discovered flames in the first floor hall and sent in the alarm. Jacob Rosen is the owner of the building and occupants are William Rosen, John Hilda and families. Damage was estimated at $50.

PERSHING WILL BE NEXT CHIEF OF STAFF

Washington, Jan. 10.—General John J. Pershing is to be the next chief of staff of the United States army, according to information today in high army circles. The present chief of staff, General Peyton C. March, will cease automatically to be entitled to that rank or position and will send his resignation to President Harding

FEARS FELT FOR NAVY AIRMEN

Lack of Word From Them Leads to Belief That Some New Mishap Has Befallen

By International News Service.

Mattice, Ont., Jan. 10.—Silence hung over the Northland today and the absence of definite word from the American balloonists has begun to cause nervousness among officials, press correspondents and friends gathered along the frontier of civilization to welcome the aeronauts.

There is much talk of the party being held up by misadventure of some sort, possibly an accident due to bad trails or illness. The Indian runner, George McLeod, who brought the first word of the safe arrival of the Americans at Moose Factory revealed further that Lieutenant Stephen A. Farrell, one of the balloonists who suffered worst on the trip while the men were lost in the forests, was in very bad shape physically.

BRITAIN LEAVES PEACE TO ERIN

Greenwood Announces Settlement Is Up to New Home Rule Government

Dublin, Jan. 10.—The Irish republican army has been active throughout the counties surrounding Dublin for the past forty-eight hours, Dublin Castle announced today. Bridges were blown up in County Cavan and roads were blocked. It is feared that a new campaign of organized violence is brewing.

Copyright, 1921 by International News Service.

London, Jan. 10.—The British Cabinet has decided to put the responsibility for the pacification of Ireland upon the new Irish government, with its dual parliamentary system which will soon be set up under the home rule law.

Announcement that Ireland must work out her own salvation of peace was made today by Sir Hamar Greenwood, chief secretary for Ireland, in an exclusive interview with the International News Service.

In reply to a question as to the peace policy of the British government and the outlook for Irish peace in 1921, Sir Hamar Greenwood said:

"The home rule act is now law. That is a historic and irrevocable fact. It is going to operate splendidly. It is a fact that the home rule law has brought the Irish situation

KNOCKED DOWN IN TRAIN, SERIOUSLY INJURED

Knocked down by a careless commuter in a hurry to leave a Boston bound train at Quincy today, Charles H. Brown, sixty-three years old, of No. 2 Sea street, North Weymouth, was trampled upon, sustaining a fractured right hip and possible internal injuries. He is now at the Quincy City Hospital in a serious condition.

The police are seeking the commuter who suddenly decided to leave the car, and lunged through the crowd to the door, knocking Brown from his feet. Before anyone could go to his aid, the crowd trampled on him.

ENGLAND 'WORLD BULLY,' SAYS FR. CUNNINGHAM

England was denounced as "the bully of the world, the Hun of all times," by Rev. Francis A. Cunningham at St. Leo's Church, Dorchester. "England is a bully with a club, beating out the life of a small nation," he declared, in announcing a meeting next Friday evening of the American Association for the Recognition of the Irish Republic at the Sarah Greenwood School, Glenway street, Dorchester.

WOMAN BURNED TO DEATH WHILE BLACKING STOVE

Mrs. Rebecca Fennebaum, thirty-two years old, of No. 28 Blossom street, Lynn, was fatally burned and Max Cohen of the same address received serious burns about the hands and head when the woman's clothing caught on fire while she was blacking a hot stove in her kitchen.

The stove polish ignited and the flames spread to her clothing. She rushed out into the hallway screaming for help. Cohen hearing her screams, ran to her aid and throwing rugs about her extinguished the flames, but not until she was severely burned about the entire body. Cohen received bad burns about the hands and lost part of his hair.

CONVICTED MAN DEFIES JUDGE

Bonanno, Sentenced to Life in Shooting Case, Dragged From Court

The judicial calm of the Middlesex Superior Criminal Court in East Cambridge was broken today, when Guisseppi Bonanno was taken before Judge Cox for sentence upon conviction of murder in the second degree.

Bonanno, who was convicted of shooting and killing his brother-in-law and cousin, Francisco Bonanno, on November 3, last, broke out into a tirade against his counsel and the court for the manner in which his trial had been conducted, and when ordered to keep quiet, began yelling and cursing so loudly that Judge Cox ordered him removed to the detention room.

He was handcuffed to two officers and dragged out of the court, still screaming.

For more than half an hour he continued his shouts and curses before quieting down sufficiently to be taken back to court.

He was sentenced to life imprisonment in the State's prison.

In passing sentence upon him, Judge Cox told Bonanno that he should consider himself as "lucky that the jury had not found him guilty of murder in the first degree."

'White Book' Scored by British Papers

By International News Service.

London, Jan. 10.—The British government's "White Paper," which was issued to support Premier Lloyd George's charge of an Irish-German conspiracy during the World War, was condemned as unconvincing by many leading British newspapers today.

The Times and the Daily News attacked the government for issuing the document, but both upheld the report of Major-General Sir Edward Strickland on the Cork fires.

"The 'White Paper' fails to support the revelations of Premier Lloyd George and Lord French (the lord-lieutenant of Ireland) in May, 1918, and, in fact, there is no convincing evidence beyond 1916," said the Manchester Guardian.

IRISH POLICY DOOMING BRITISH EMPIRE, SAYS COHALAN

ENGLAND, NOT ERIN, ON TRIAL BEFORE WORLD, HE SAYS

The case of Friends of Irish Freedom against President De Valera was set forth by Judge Dadiel Cohalan, an accounting of its financial aid to the cause in America and Erin was rendered by Thomas Cooney and a pledge made to continue the fight for freedom "behind no man," but "behind a principle until it succeeds" at meetings of State and city councils in the Tremont Theatre and on Boston Common.

Cardinal O'Connell sent a message to the meetings urging contributions to the relief of destitute in Erin, as duty before all friends of the country. Attorney John F. Walsh, who presided, reviewed the perfidy behind the history of Anglo-American relations and referred to Judge Cohalan as having been described in effect by Lloyd George as "the one great obstacle to an Anglo-American alliance." Tremont Theatre was filled to capacity and many priests sat on the platform.

"I've been asked to present to you the Irish questions from an American point of view," said Judge Cohalan, in beginning. "It has ceased to be an Irish question; it has ceased to be an American question, it is now an international problem. It's a long story. One may touch only the high spots."

CARDINAL AROUSED NATION.

Judge Cohalan then paid a glowing tribute to the work of Cardinal O'Connell, whom he described as "an extraordinary man, who in 1918, in Madison Square Garden, New York, made a great contribution to the Irish cause, and who has since made a great contribution, but it was only the start."

Here Judge Cohalan thrilled the audience by reciting the story of how Americans of Irish blood were aroused to the cause in all parts of the country as a result of Cardinal O'Connell's great speech and put themselves on record for a free Ireland. He paid United States Senator David I. Walsh great praise for the part he took in the fight against the League of Nations. Mention of Senator Walsh's name brought rounds of applause.

He told of the accomplishments of the Friends of Irish Freedom in combatting English propaganda in getting whole pages of advertisements in newspapers throughout the country. He said the success of one event was crowded out by the next. He showed how it was through the assistance of the Friends of Irish Freedom organization that President De Valera was acclaimed from one end of the country to the other.

HOW BREACH WAS CAUSED.

"He came to a united 20,000,000 of Irish blood in this country, all of whom were united as never before in the history of the country," said Judge Cohalan. "If there has been any change in that united front it has been caused by those who left here."

Judge Cohalan held up to the severing of his relationship with De Valera over the resolutions rejected at the Democratic convention in San Francisco and the Republican convention in Chicago. They told the conference in Senator Smith's room in Washington concerning the so-called Mason resolution in Congress and of De Valera's trip to Plattsburg to confer with Canadian leaders on the Irish question.

His told how Major Kincaide of New Jersey advised De Valera that the latter was making a grave mistake and how De Valera never got in touch with him (Cohalan) regarding the resolution presented at the Chicago convention.

RECALLS DE VALERA'S AFFRONT.

Judge Cohalan recalls the "affront to Americans of Irish birth or extraction" by De Valera when he said at one meeting that he was there "to speak for Ireland and that he wouldn't let anybody else speak for the old land."

Judge Cohalan then read a plank he himself had inserted in a resolution favoring recognition of the Irish Republic.

A man in the gallery interrupted Judge Cohalan by a suggestion of "burying the hatchet."

"We're going to bury the hatchet," said Judge Cohalan.

"Then get behind De Valera," yelled a woman.

"We'll get behind no man," said Judge Cohalan, dramatically, amidst great applause. "We're behind a cause, we're behind a principle. I'm here as an American. We're talking of a principle, something that is going on until it succeeds. We're here to see what can be done.

"England by her course of action in Ireland at present is taxing the patience of the world. No words can properly describe the extreme cruelty which her agents are going in their campaign of murder, pillage and brutality in Ireland. The worst things that were charged against the Germans in Belgium, or the Turks in Armenia and which were denied by them, are admitted by England's spokesman as being done by her in Ireland today.

"She hopes to escape the consequences of these acts because she believes the world to be hardened to suffering by the world war and to be surfeited with false stories of the cause of the happenings of the last few years. She hopes to escape because of the great reaction against war which has followed naturally the greatest war in history, and the cause of the genius of her spokesmen for calling ugly deeds by pleasant words, but she reckons without her host.

BRITAIN STOPS AT NOTHING.

The world is already full of indignation against her because of the manner in which she cried out for help, like a great bully, when her enemies were beating her; and then after America saved her not alone seized territory from her adversaries, but cheated her allies and associates. Even America, which saved her, has not been exempted from her age long practice of taking advantage of those who helped her.

"Every day American public opinion is being hardened against her because of the manner in which she seeks to take to herself the monopoly of world business. Her position on the cable questions; on the oil problems; on the passport matters all show that she stops at nothing in order to out her competitors at a disadvantage with her in doing business with the rest of the world.

"Her tyranny in India, her brutality in Egypt and her absolute return to barbarism in her treatment of Ireland, are shocking the conscience of the world, and bringing near the time when no administration, no matter how strongly it may be bent upon helping England can hold back the irresistible tide of American public opinion in its demand that this blot upon civilized government shall be destroyed. At this very moment she seeks to make a part of her tyranny. With unparalleled hypocrisy she tells us she is unable to pay the billions of dollars she owes to us, and seeks to have her overdue debt to us funded into long-time bonds, while she takes the money with which she should pay her debt to us to spend it in a futile effort to destroy a people bound by the closest ties of blood and sympathy to American.

"She has many friends in high places in our country—her propagandists are working over time to becloud the issue and prevent us from seeing clearly conditions as they are.

"England has been tried in the balance and found wanting, and a continuance of her practices in Ireland will necessarily spell the destruction of the British Empire. It is not Ireland that is on trial before the world but England. It is not those who speak for Ireland whose mistakes will count, but those who speaking with the voice of authority for England have made her government a term of reproach throughout the world and are rapidly making the name of Englishman one of contempt and hatred among lovers of liberty in every land."

WALSH UNVEILS "WHITE BOOK."

State President Daniel J. Moran of Lynn called the theatre meeting to order and presented Lillian Hennessey of South Boston, known as the "Little Shamrock," who recited and sang "The Low Back Car" and the "Wearing of the Green." She was followed by Margaret Moran of Lynn, who sang several Irish ballads.

Attorney Joseph P. Walsh, presented as the chairman of the meeting, said in part:

Those in America who point out England's hostile actions and who are attempting to meet and defeat her campaign of bitterness against America naturally arouse England's deepest anger and her most powerful efforts to destroy such persons. Lloyd George's latest "White Book" unquestionably is directed to an attempt through lies to destroy those whom England most fears. It is but the latest of many efforts to destroy by any means feasible the man who for many years has been the means of defeating every effort of England to secure an Anglo-American alliance.

ACCOUNTS FOR VICTORY FUND.

Attorney Thomas Cooney of Providence, who substituted for Michael J. Ryan, went into the details leading up to the collection of the so-called Irish victory fund and the false rumors that have been circulated regarding how it was spent.

"It was deemed necessary to institute a fund to combat the insidious propaganda started by the British government in this country," said Mr. Cooney, "and it was proposed that the sum of $1,500,000 be raised, which was to be expended in America.

The speaker here dwelt on the success achieved in neutralizing the attacks made by British propagandists against the Irish Republic and referred to the arrival of President De Valera in this country and the part the Friends of Freedom took in arranging for the receptions accorded to the latter. Cooney was interrupted at this juncture by some women in the gallery calling for "three cheers for De Valera." The response was enthusiastic.

Continuing, Cooney showed how $2,005,000 had been collected up to the arrival of De Valera in this country. Later, added Cooney, $990,000 was collected.

"One hundred and fifteen thousand went to Ireland. In addition to that when Kelly and Duffy were in Paris to get recognition for the Irish Republic $21,000 was spent for their expenses.

"When De Valera came (more applause from the gallery)—the sum of $26,000 was used in financing trips for De Valera throughout the country. When he got ready to launch his bond certificate drive proposition as one of the trustees I consented to giving him $100,000 in buying that amount of bond certificates as representing the Friends of Irish Freedom's share in the purchase of the bonds.

"Something like $386,000 were spent. We financed the bureau in Washington, D. C., presided over by Captain Daniel T. O'Connell from Boston.

"It might be well for you to know that the $990,000 has been expended, generously and giving willingly for the cause of Ireland. There have been so many distortions of the truth, I feel it is my duty to tell you what the fund was and where it has gone.

"Recently I read in the Boston newspapers a statement from a man to the effect that there was $400,000 in the Irish Victory fund and that it should be sent to Ireland. The man who made that statement was

Irish Leaders in Action, Caught by Artist Harmony

Correction on a report that appeared in one of our issues of last week that Morris Winer, operating a chain of creamery stores, was fined for selling butter below standard for sale.

We wish to impress upon the public that it was pure butter made from natural cream—and not adulterated in any way, but it contained 2% more buttermilk than the standard requires which was the fault of the Creamery and not Morris Winer.

CARDINAL URGES RELIEF.

Rev. Fr. Florence J. O'Halloran, representing Cardinal O'Connell, read the following message:

"I regret exceedingly that my duties this evening will oblige me to forego the pleasure of being with you, but I am happy to take this opportunity to assure you that I welcome earnest work for Ireland from every source.

"Ireland needs the support of every one of her friends. Her present condition is so distressing and the odds against her so overwhelming that no influence which can help her should be neglected.

"The splendid record of achievement which has marked the history of the Friends of Irish Freedom should be a constant incentive to them to work for Ireland with unabated energy.

"There are various groups in this country whose holy purpose is to help the people of Ireland to attain their rightful place among the nations. There may be legitimate divergence of opinion as to means and measures, but the spirit which should animate all should be the same.

"There is a very urgent duty before all friends of Ireland at this moment. Reports based upon the most accurate observations tell us of the distressing conditions existing in every part of the land. Many thousands are facing the danger of starvation; scores of thousands are in dire need. The cruel Winter is upon them, and we must come to their rescue.

"Every sentiment of humanity and Christian charity, as well as every prompting of affection, urges us to aid them to the limit of our ability.

"Recently the American Committee for the Relief of the Destitute in Ireland has been formed with headquarters in New York. It is composed of prominent citizens from all over the country, and it is the plain duty of us all to co-operate with that committee in its work and that the relief sent will be so generous that it will reach into every factory dwelling that it will touch every saddened heart with new hope; and that it will sustain the spirit of the Irish people in the life-and-death struggle for their rights."

Among the clergyman on the platform were the Rev. John T. Mullen, D. C. L., of Hudson; Rev. Phillip J. O'Donnell of Boston; Rev. Joseph Cassidy of Roxbury; Rev. Austin Doherty; Rev. Francis J. Butler of Somerville; Rev. John C. Hart of Roxbury, Rev. Michael P. Doody, P. R. of Cambridgeport, sat in a box. Others on the platform were former Congressman Joseph F. O'Connell, Richard J. Savage of Roxbury, Dr. Peter Fleming of Mattapan, Arthur Harrington of Charlestown, Edward F. McSweeney, Eugene McSweeney and Matthew Cummings.

TEXT OF RESOLUTIONS.

Matthew J. Cummings read resolutions which were unanimously Adopted, as follows:

Whereas, the Friends of Irish Freedom, under the leadership of citizens of the United States, has successfully carried on a movement to defeat the purpose of Anglo-Saxon propaganda to rewrite our school histories on the Revolution have been exposed; the British attempt to create a false public opinion favorable to England through the Pilgrim Tercentenary was thwarted; the British movement to cancel England's debt to this country was exposed; the British effort to regain control of the world's potential supply of oil and food was revealed; British dominance of the trade routes of the world, its control over the seas, and the world's markets have been forcibly brought to America's attention, and

Whereas, during the last six months the English government, solely because of the Irish people's love of liberty, by its record of crueity, disregard of human rights and civilized decency has exceeded the Cromwellian horrors of Wexford and Drogheda, and with a malignity equalled only in primitive savagery, has given the world an exhibition of frightfulness beside which the alleged atrocities of Belgium fade into insignificance.

PLEDGE FULL SUPPORT.

Therefore, Be it resolved:

That we assembled pledge ourselves to insist upon the recognition of the Irish Republic by the United States.

That we pledge our fullest support to "The American Committee of Relief in Ireland," and heartily endorse the vote of the National Council appropriating for the use of that committee the sum of $25,000.

That this meeting record its appreciation of the wise, patriotic, effective work accomplished by the Friends of Irish Freedom under the leadership of its American officials.

That we pledge our ernest and unceasing efforts to continue and increase our support and assistance to the brave men and women in Ireland who are today holding the gap in their magnificent fight for recognition of the Republic of Ireland.

That we protest against the invasion of America's sovereignty by England in its treatment of the American steamer Fortia and of its crew.

That we protest against any refunding by this country of England's debt to it.

'PEACE IN ERIN UP TO IRISH'

Sir Hamar Greenwood Declares Settlement Must Come Under Home Rule Plan out of a fog of words into the sunshine of reality.

SELECTING CANDIDATES.

"In Ulster province (the Unionist stronghold in Northern Ireland) candidates are now being selected for the constituent election to the Northern Parliament.

"The formation of a cabinet and government is now a matter of but a few months.

"In southern and western Ireland there will be an election to choose members for the southern Parliament. The first members of the southern Parliament will be makers of history and the makers of a new Ireland. Southern Irishmen are coming forward as candidates. Some of them are men who have never bothered about politics before, but Ireland is their country and 'they intend to make their Parliament a success. Many of the old Nationalists are considering the question of candidatures.

"The Farmers' Union has become a powerful and numerous body since the last general election in 1918, and in Ireland as elsewhere farmers are seeking political representation. Agriculture is the principal industry in southern Ireland and both Parliaments will have full power to legislate in behalf of the agricultural interests.

THE SINN FEINERS.

"The present Sinn Feiners may or may not stand for election to the parliaments. I do not know. But I know many others will be candidates whether Sinn Fein or the spirit of Sinn Fein people.

"All arrangement for the elections and for setting up the different departments of the new local governments are being made. They will be complete in a few months.

"The future of Ireland is now largely in the hands of the Irish people themselves.

"The home rule act will not be altered nor amended except on request of the Irish people assembling through their duly elected representatives."

The British government, it is made plain by government officials, will not treat with the Irish Republican government headed by Eamon De Valera, nor conduct peace negotiations with the Sinn Fein or the military organization. Sinn Fein officials will be received in conference by officials of the British government only in the capacity of private citizens.

If the moderates among the Republicans are able to get the upper hand over the extremists, it is possible that the Sinn Feiners may consent themselves with attempting to secure domination of the southern parliament through duly selected representatives. Such a contingency would be acknowledged by the whole home rule schems of government and would mean the abrogation of the Sinn Fein parliament.

6 Months for Irish Arrested at Dance

Dublin, Jan. 10.—Forty men who were arrested at Bruff, County Limerick, following a fatal battle when the police raided a Sinn Fein dance, were sentenced to six months at hard labor today.

They were charged with unlawful assembly. Fifty-eight others are in jail awaiting trial on the same charge.

A co-operative creamery near Glin, County Limerick, was burned during the night.

This is the second official reprisal by British troops has just taken place near Cork. In retaliation for the recent ambush of soldiers at Dillon's Cross, the military authorities sent tanks to the scene, which destroyed a house and leveled a wall from behind which shots had been fired. The work of destruction was in progress two Hours.

An outbreak was reported from Dublin in which republicans were said to have ambushed a detachment of crown forces.

Liberty or Ruin, Says Mayor O'Callaghan

New York, Jan. 10.—"Ireland will accept nothing but absolute freedom and, unless it is granted, we may look forward to continued bloodshed, terror and violence."

This declaration was made here today by Mayor J. J. O'Callaghan, the successor of Terence MacSwiney as Lord Mayor of Cork, who came here from Norfolk, where he had landed as a stowaway.

"Ireland will not accept home rule, no matter what might be said to the contrary," continued O'Callaghan. "If political freedom is not granted the Emerald Isle will be devastated rather than submit. There are but two alternatives—liberty or ruin.

Plot to Blow Up Parliament Buildings

London, Jan. 10.—A plot to blow up Parliament building by officers of the Irish republican army has just been foiled by Scotland Yard, according to the Empire News today.

A man and a girl who had been under surveillance by Secret Service agents were arrested on Thames embankment, it is said, with their handbag into the river. It was recovered, and, according to the Empire News, contained documents which revealed the plot. There were plans for the construction of infernal bombs, explosive and incendiary, which could be exploded from a long distance.

Scotland Yard officials admitted the arrest of a man and a woman "in connection with Sinn Fein activities," but discounted the story of the plot.

British Troops in Charge of U. S. Ship

London, Jan. 10.—The American liner Honolulu, which arrived yesterday, was boarded by the military and police off Queenstown.

The troops remain in charge.

It is said that the ship had a cargo of relief supplies for Cork.

The Honolulu is a United States Shipping Board vessel and sailed from New York December 29, bound for Cork and Limerick.

Holyoke Society in 'Orgy,' Says Pastor

Holyoke, Jan. 10.—Charges that the "Four Hundred" of Holyoke staged a New Year's Eve party at the Nonotuck Hotel which "out did Belshazzar's Feast," were made in a sermon by Rev. Galus J. Slosser at the First Methodist Church.

While in years past only "bums", entered the "New Year drunk," this year society matrons, debutantes and their escorts disgraced themselves, according to the clergyman.

He said the celebration of some $30 society people was an "orgy," accompanied by "all the immorality and indecency that goes with a drunken debauch."

"The wickedness of this orgy was contrary to statutory and moral law," he said.

"Scores of hitherto splendid young people became disgracefully intoxicated.

"All the rottenness of the underworld has been staged under the auspices of supposedly decent society."

P. J. Behan, manager of the hotel, said the charges of immorality and indecency were absolutely unfounded.

50 FAMILIES IN U. S. CONTROL OVER $100,000,000 EACH

3 BILLION JOHN D.'S FORTUNE

Wealth of Nation Concentrated in Hands of Comparatively Few Persons, Figures Show

New York, Jan. 10.—Fifty families in the United States control over $100,000,000 each; one hundred families control over $30,000,000 each; five hundred families control over $10,000,000 each.

John D. Rockefeller's estate is now up to $3,000,000,000.

Five billion dollars of wealth in the United States has been handed down to heirs in the past fifteen years.

Two hundred persons in the United States control $15,000,000,000. In France the same amount is controlled by four hundred and eighty times that number of people, or 96,000.

Industrially, the United States is becoming dynastic—there is a veritable dynasty in each important industrial structure, some of which are:

Sixty per cent. of the tobacco trust wealth is in the hands of ten families.

Twelve families, with the Rockefeller family away in the lead, control 50 per cent. of the oil industry.

The railroads of the country are controlled by 1.3 of the stockholders.

One and five-tenths of the stockholders in the steel trust possess 51 per cent. of the stock.

Two families control 51 per cent. of the stock in the Harvester Company.

These striking figures on the concentration of wealth in the United States were obtained today from Henry B. Klein, deputy commissioner of accounts of New York city and a deep student of economic affairs. He has spent ten years collecting concrete facts on the pyramiding of American wealth.

LIST OF VAST HOLDINGS.

Mr. Klein's attention was called to the recent statement of George P. Hampton, managing director of the Farmers' National Council, that thirty-three individuals own 3 per cent. of the entire American national wealth. He estimated this 3 per cent. at about $3,837,000,000. Mr. Hampton gave no names but the following lists of individuals and estates and their vast holdings, checked up to a recent date was given today by Mr. Klein:

ESTATES OR INDIVIDUAL	AMOUNT
J. D. and William Rockefeller	$3,000,000,000 to $5,000,000,000

A. C. James Family	60,000,000
Cleveland Dodge	60,000,000
Pullman estate	50,000,000

MANY IN 40 MILLION CLASS.

There are many families Mr. Klein mentioned in the $40,000,000 class and this includes Mrs. William Leeds, now Princess Christopher of Greece, and Alexander Smith Cochrane, until recently America's "richest bachelor" and now the husband of Mme. Ganna Walska, opera singer.

Mr Klein's list, which is several pages long, does not go below the $10,000 000 class.

He has compiled these figures and data on those "who own America" to point out the danger of the concentration of wealth in the United States, the evils of tax exempt securities, which are heavily held by the big estates, and in advocacy of a constitutional amendment for the limitation of private fortunes. Mr. Klein points out that most of the Rockefeller institutions are supported by wealth invested in tax-exempted securities. And he added: "They haven't spent what they have saved in taxation."

"The concentration of wealth in the United States," the deputy commissioner declared, "has reached the last stage. It will be very dangerous to permit it to go further. The economic structure is top-heavy and it cannot be cured by any wild-eyed theories of Socialism or Bolshevism. The top must be sliced off; it must be made to stand the burden of governmental expense."

DR. ROGERS SAYS TEACHER OF TODAY IS "TYRANT"

Charging that the school teacher of today is a tyrant, Dr. Alfred P. Rogers, in an address before the Harvard Medical School, declared schoolmasters were requiring too much effort of pupils for mental development and not enough for physical development. Dr. Rogers stated that one schoolmaster had made a rule preventing a pupil from being excused on account of dental appointments.

'Loveliest Girl' Ideas of Artist Major

By ERNEST LEE MAJOR,

Well known Boston artist, member of faculty of Massachusetts Normal Art School and one of the five judges in Boston American "Loveliest Girl" contest.

What the other judges in the American's "Loveliest Girl" contest have already written leaves to me, a painter, very little to say.

Beauty covers a wide range and is too subtle to be analyzed and dissected. There is, as the Good Book says, beauty of all kinds. Every race and nation has its ideals and they are their own. The French have claimed that the Anglo-Celtic type resemble the heads in Greek sculpture but unlike those marbles as they are lacking in length of nose.

The Japanese type is said to be a long oval face with eyes with full lids and the brown lips protruding. I remember one youth, a Chinese who, according to type seemed to me to possess great beauty. The negro, when true to type, also possesses great beauty.

WANTED OTHER TYPE.

I personally was disappointed that we did not have presented for judgment some of the lovely types that now exist that have become part of this great nation by the admixture of several races.

In the competition and by the competitors themselves a little too much stress was put on the "Loveliest Girl." I personally should have preferred laying stress on the "Finest Woman"—the ideal of American feminity. As it was, one of the most superb types we had in the last eleven, from which we chose the winners, was a woman over thirty-five.

Only yesterday I saw a Brookline woman, who has grown children, who for character, poise, health, form and color, I think could have held her own with any of the successful competitors. Our aged and middle aged types here in America are superb.

CHARACTER IS NEEDED.

In the movies, one often sees an actor long past their first youth who has a statuesque grandeur that no youth however delicate and lovely could compete with. All this only makes for one thing and that is character. No beauty is ever of high order that is not built on character.

Cultivation, disposition (a good one), fortitude, all these and more certainly model the features and give it that finish and completion that is demanded of the judicious.

Some wise observer has remarked that "God makes your eyes but that we ourselves make our mouths." Right here I may observe that it seemed to me that a great many of the photos in the competition showed beautiful eyes but that the mouths were shapeless, unformed, showing a lack of character and firmness. Please allow me to digress here a little to remark that I don't agree with the saying that the "camera never lies." The camera always lies!

BETTER THAN PHOTOS.

As long as the lines of human eye (God-made) is different from the lense of the camera (man-made) just so long will the machine lie. Photographs are not like people and it takes a very clever person to handle camera so as not to make a caricature of the sitter.

I think I could say that all of the eleven competitors whom we saw were better than their photographs represented them and I am sure the same would be said of a great many of the others whom we had to judge solely from the photographs.

CARE OF THE HAIR.

Many of the pictures were what I call freak photographs and showed more of the character of the photographer than of the sitter; often the poses were what painters call theatric, affected and did not in any way show the personality of the competitor. Another thing that gave a disagreeable impression to the judges was the impossible arrangements of chignon; hair dressing that undoubtedly represented the latest styles from the Fiji Islands.

Taste and neatness in the disposition of hair indicate character and cultivated taste, just as much as in the choice of colors, materials, etc., etc. Refinement, simplicity and a delightful cordiality marked the manners of the eleven competitors, who came to my studio and made me feel proud of being allowed to be a judge of what seems to be typically an American affair. The present moment here in America presents, as I believe no other epoch has, a beauty of refinement, both in the men and women, that is typically indicative of a great degree of aesthetic culture.

My only regret is that the prejudice so many refined people leave to newspaper notoriety, prevented us, the judges, from having a larger field to choose from and some day I hope to hear that the first prize in such a contest has been won by a grandmother of even a great-grandmother who by her force of character, love and patriotic devotion been the ancestor of such as in the past few years exemplified the beautiful idealism, where both sexes by their supreme sacrifice showed that nobility of unselfishness that has never been surpassed.

Report Dead Revived by New Drug

By International News Service.

London, Jan. 10.—The sensational announcement that he had discovered a medical agent which revives the dead was made today by Dr. Cranston Walker, a practicing physician at Birmingham. The death defying substance is known as adrenalin.

Adrenalin, according to a statement in the British Medical Journal, is an extract from the kidney glands of animals and has been in use with complete success since 1910. It has been used in at least twenty cases, but knowledge of it existed only among the medical fraternity. One case where it was used was that of an eleven-months-old child that collapsed under an operation. Heart massage proved ineffectual.

The body had cooled when adrenalin was injected. The heart, which had ceased to beat for four minutes, immediately recommenced and the child recovered.

Another case was that of a woman of thirty who had apparently dropped dead of heart failure. The heart had ceased to beat, the jaw was rigid and the eyes set, all indicating that death had occurred. Adrenalin was injected and in a few minutes the woman was sitting up and talking.

Alcoholic Insanity Increases

Chicago, Jan. 10.—Alcoholic insanity is on the increase, now that alcohol is officially no more. Records of the Cook County Psychopathic Hospital show that cases due to alcoholism have greatly increased since prohibition.

GIDDY GRANDEE QUITS NEW LOVE

Shakes Hands With Husband of Woman He Stole at Gun Point; Returns to His Wife

Chicago, Jan. 10.—The romance of Grandee Pierre Paul Auther, French war hero, and Mrs. Charlotte Fransen, wife of Dr. Phil Fransen, of the University of Wisconsin, has ended. And the hearts that bled have been [illegible].

The dashing Frenchman took Mrs. Fransen from her husband at the point of a pistol after he had invaded the cozy little home in Madison, Wis., last Tuesday. Mrs. Fransen admitted to her husband she loved the Frenchman and would go with him. They fled to St. Louis, where they were apprehended and returned to Chicago Saturday night.

Unexpectedly the four principals were brought together at midnight. There was a reconciliation.

WON OVER BY WIFE.

Mrs. Auther agreed to drop charges against her husband if he would return to her. Mr. Fransen said he would take his wife back if she was willing to come.

Everybody agreed but Pierre. The dapper Frenchman wanted Charlotte.

"Give me my Charlotte," he pleaded. "She loves me as no other woman can."

But Mrs. Auther clung to him desperately, saying over and over again:

"Pierre, I love you. I love you more than she does."

And Pierre was finally won over by his wife.

The four signed some legal-looking documents, swearing marital fidelity.

WOMEN IN TEARS.

Then Mr. and Mrs. Fransen gathered their baby in their arms and Mr. and Mrs. Auther linked arms and fondled the baby they carried and prepared to leave.

Pierre Paul Auther turned to Fransen.

"Now I will say good-by," he said. "Again let me say I am sorry. In the future I am your friend."

"Thank you, old man," said Fransen, extending his hand. "This past week will be forgotten. I wish you luck."

The women were in tears. They clung to their husbands and did not look at each other.

DAN CUPID IS KEPT IN DOUBT

Phone Official Isn't Saying He Will or Won't Wed Divorcee He Hasn't Met

Is Robert A. Nicholls, official of the telephone company, engaged to Helen Smith, whose name some weeks ago was linked with that of William Hanson, the janitor who is reported to be heir to a quarter of a million dollars?

Miss Smith, who though but nineteen years old, is a divorcee, says he is her "mail fiance," and has allowed an announcement of her engagement to the local man, who lives in Winthrop Centre, to be published in the papers of her home city, Syracuse, N. Y.

"No girl has the right to make me so much trouble," declared Nicholls today, when asked about the report.

According to the story told by Miss Smith, her picture was printed in the Boston papers at the time she was negotiating with the janitor, object matrimony.

She says that Nicholls, who has a son at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, is thirty-nine years old and a widower, saw that picture and immediately capitulated.

He wrote to her, she avers, and their engagement followed. They have not met, as yet.

Nicholls today refused to say that Miss Smith was right. He also refused to say that she is wrong. He refuses, indeed, to discuss the matter at all—for publication.

"This is an outrage," he exclaimed. "Men marry in peace and quiet, without the newspapers making buffoons of them before the public.

"Personally I have given no paper the right to say that I am engaged to that Syracuse girl."

Asked if he had written to Miss Smith, Mr. Nicholls balked.

"I have nothing to say that the public is interested in hearing," he asserted.

"My private affairs of the heart—and mind you, that is not admitting that I have any such things—are my own business.

"If people keep on mixing me up in this mess, I'll be forced to sue.

"When the busybodies of the city and a few fool newspapers try to marry a man off to a girl he never saw it's time heconsulted his lawyer.

"That's all I have to say, but I'd like to thrash the man who started this thing, and I'll do my best to thrash the next man who asks me about it."

Isolation of All Smokers Aim of Evangelist

"Smokers ought to be isolated. They should be placed where smoking could be carried on with impunity."

This was the opinion expressed today by Miss Mary Holman of the Evangelistic Association of New England, who is opposed to public smoking.

"This public method of blowing smoke into women's faces is about as obnoxious a thing as anything possibly can be," she continued. "We women are not enjoying the volumes of cigarette smoke we are obliged to breathe as we find a number of youths taking their last puff before they swing themselves into the subway.

"It is getting to be a nuisance, not only in the subway but in the elevators. If women interfered with the public rights of men as some men interfere with the public rights of women we would hear a great howl.

"Why do not these youths who are smoking cigarettes have some sort of respect for people in crowds? It will result in women taking active steps to stop the sale and use of tobacco through their privilege of voting. The reasonable man who smokes will do so without making it offensive to others. These I do not attack.

"We lay all the credit for conditions which I have described to the war and the distribution of cigarettes among young men."

NEW CLUBHOUSE FOR WOMEN

Durant Corporation of 105 Bostonians Plans Combined Gymnasium and Hotel

A combination gymnasium, clubhouse and women's hotel has been planned by 105 Boston women, all but three of whom are self-supporting, who have been incorporated under the laws of Massachusetts.

The new corporation, for which a tax-exempt charter has been granted, is called The Durant Incorporated, in honor of Mrs. Pauline A. Durant, who with her husband, Henry Durant, founded Wellesley College. Mrs. Durant, as president of the Y. W. C. A. in 1884, first introduced physical education into general use for women and girls.

OUTGROWTH OF GYMNASIUM.

The Durant Incorporated is an outgrowth of the Durant Gymnasium Club, which was organized in 1907, incorporated in 1915, and which has had headquarters at No. 44 St. Botolph street since 1915 and a country clubhouse at Morse's Pond Grove, Wellesley.

All of the 105 women of the new corporation are members of this club, which will continue in existence, but will have no connection with the new organization.

Plans of the Durant Incorporated, which has opened offices at No. 739 Boylston street, call for an intensive campaign during the next year for a membership of 20,000 from among the self-supporting women of Boston and vicinity. The fee for life membership is $50. When one-third of the 20,000 members have been secured the land for the new building will be purchased, and when the total has been reached work on the building will be commenced.

DANCING OPPORTUNITIES.

In addition to gymnasium facilities the new building will afford opportunities for dancing, theatricals, motion pictures, games, lectures and debates.

Prominent among the organizers is Miss Hope Wentworth Narey, professor of physical education at Mt. Holyoke College and for nearly twenty-five years director of the Durant Gymnasium of Boston. The officers are: Dr. Blanca A. Denig, president; Miss Florence B. Child, first vice-president and executive organizer; Miss Margery T. Jewell of West Somerville, second vice-president; Miss Lillian F. Thain of Cambridge, secretary; Miss Maud Frances Elliott, treasurer.

Income Taxes Must Be Corrected at Once

Erroneous income tax returns filed by corporations must be corrected and the amount of tax due the government must be paid at once, according to the following statement issued by Internal Revenue Collector John J. Mitchell:

"Corporations which made deductions in 1918 in their income tax returns, for contributions to the Red Cross and other recognized war organizations, should file with the Internal Collector a statement showing the amount of such deductions claimed, the amount of net income as reported and corrected, and the amount of additional tax due by reason of erroneous claims of deduction. The total amount of tax shown to be due by such statement should be paid at once, together with interest on each instalment from the original date due."

The penalty for failure is 5 per cent, with interest.

WOMAN BEATEN WITH HAMMER

Roxbury Husband Denies Charges of Police That He Attacked Her

Charged with attacking his wife with a hammer, Edward W. Flattish of No. 193 Vernon street, Roxbury, pleaded not guilty in Roxbury court today and was held in $1,000 for a hearing on January 17.

Aroused by cries from the Flattish residence, neighbors called the police who found Mrs. Flattish in a serious condition from wounds on the scalp and body. Blood was spattered about the floor and walls of the house, they said.

The husband was not in the house when the officers arrived but he was arrested later at a house in Weston place, Roxbury, by Sergeant Edward A. Ryan of the Roxbury station. The man's hands according to the sergeant, were covered with blood at the time of his arrest although he denied the attack.

Fire in Jamaica Plain

Fire broke out today in an airshaft between the first and second floors of the six-story brick building at No. 32 Robinwood avenue, Jamaica Plain. The building is owned by W. R. Whelpley. The damage was $50.

Real Conservatism O. K., Says Dr. Conrad

Real conservatism, such as the better type of leaders in Boston display, makes for municipal safety and dignity, as well as for the surest kind of progress, declares Rev. Dr. A. Z. Conrad, in commenting upon the charge made by Rev. Dr. Paul Revere Frothingham, that "Boston is the most conservative city in the most conservative section of the United States."

Here is what Dr. Conrad has to say:—

By REV. DR. A. Z. CONRAD
Pastor of the Park Street Church

Conservatism makes for safety, for dignity, for steady and balanced progress. The splash and dash, the roam and foment, the whirlwind type of life has certain advantages for certain sections of this republic and for newly-established towns that have to be put on the map by enthusiasts. No one can question the possibility of mistaking mossbackism and sluggish torpor for conservatism. There are people who like to attribute to themselves conservatism as an excuse for downright laziness.

People whose minds have either ceased to function or who think too slowly to keep pace with a progressive civilization like to say: "You know I am conservative." Boston has a lot of such people. With them anyone who is wideawake and doing things is sensational.

Conservatism of the right type is alert, open minded, positive and progressive, yet weighs and measures, thinks and balances probabilities, refuses to part company with his common sense and makes every move count for a sensible goal.

The man or woman determined to live a century behind the calendar is not conservative, but a mere clam sticking out a head on a long neck for one and only one purpose, namely, to say "I object."

The outstanding feature of some people who have never done a thing for Boston except to be born of some descendant of the "Mayflower adventurers" is to insist that not one thing be done to meet the imperative needs of a growing city. No street must be changed, no improvements interfering in the least with anything a hundred years old.

These people are not conservative. They are obstructionists. It is mighty easy for a "mossback" to get under the protection of "conservative" and feel comfortable.

Boston is on the whole the best place to live in on the American continent. It has a solid lot of sensible people who have no disposition to be iconoclastic, who are not ruthless destructionists, who bank more on character and ability than on commercialized zeal and who, when they have the choice, like a shag-barked walnut with meat in it better than a polished acorn with a bitter inside; who prefer an uncut diamond to a polished pebble; who discriminate between white-stocking aristocracy and keen-brained, big-hearted personality.

This town abounds in many types. We have our share of high-browed non-productive parasites and also our share of cranks with crossed wires megaphoning their own virtues and never paying cash.

We have a lot of hyphenated citizens who will be wiser when they have been longer in the best land the sun shines on.

We have plenty of coupon-cutters who never did a day's work in their lives. Yes, we have more people who can start a new religion and get a following in twenty-four hours, or who can pull the long green out of old stockings for crazy-quilt and blue-sky speculations than almost any other city. And on the other hand we have away beyond our quota of high-minded, clear-headed business men; our leaders of thought in every department of life.

We have a host of aggressive nation-builders and home-makers. We have more than our share of profound and earnest men and women who stand like a flint for the best and the very best. A lot of things need to be done to this town right now. Park street should be made fifty feet wide at once.

Parking space for 5,000 automobiles should be arranged for under the Common. Tunnels should connect the two great railroad terminals, etc. Let us be aggressive and properly make way for the new era, and the large and greater Boston, while yet we wisely conserve and protect the best we have. We must face tomorrow and not yesterday. Let us keep our eyes to the rising sun of the new day.

Issues Warning That Move Is Under Way to Destroy Direct Primary

By International News Service.

Washington, Jan. 10.—Senator Hiram Johnson of California today issued a significant public statement which contained a warning that "Reaction is on today" and that progressivism, though perhaps momentarily forgotten, "is yet enshrined in the hearts of millions."

The immediate subject of the California Senator's statement was the direct primary. This is endangered, he said, and it is progressivism's immediate duty to se that it is saved from those who would destroy it.

"I have read much lately," said Senator Johnson, "about the passing of progressivism. Progressivism has not passed. Certain progressives have. The limelight progressives who were more interested in office than in policies have wanted their honorable past forgotten and have endeavored to atone by outregulating regularity.

"But progressivism, though forgotten by many so-called leaders is still cherished by the great inarticulate mass; is still enshrined in the hearts of millions.

"Reaction is on today. Reaction against the human advance of the past quarter of a century and reaction against the political right with such difficulty won by the people. Reaction always shows itself first in attack upon the right of the electorate to choose for itself its candidates for office; and today we witness the assault all along the line upon the direct primary.

"If this succeeds there is little that exploiting privilege has to fear from public officials. With the primary destroyed, officials generally will answer as in former days, not to all the people but to the powerful few."

NO IMMUNITY FOR MRS. NOTT

Accused Wife Must Stand Trial at Next Session of Fairfield County Court

Bridgeport, Ct., Jan. 10.—Mrs. Ethel H. Nott has received no promise of immunity for turning State's evidence and testifying against Elwood B. Wade, on trial here for murder, according to her counsel, A. S. Geduldig.

Indicted with Wade for the murder of her husband, Mrs. Nott's trial will probably follow in a few weeks that of the man accused of the actual murder. The third alleged conspirator in the crime, John Edward Johnston, is also expected to go on trial for his part in the killing, after Mrs. Nott.

MRS. NOTT'S TRIAL LATER.

Mrs. Nott's trial probably will not be held until the next session of the Fairfield County Superior Court. Johnston's will be held in the same session and immediately after hers, according to present plans.

Mrs. Nott's voluntary appearance as a witness for the State caused many to predict that as a reward she might escape trial for murder of the first degree. This was emphatically denied by her attorney.

"My reason for permitting Mrs. Nott to take the stand," he said, "was that I felt she had everything to gain and nothing to lose."

Wade's case is expected to reach the jury late Wednesday or early Thursday. It appeared unlikely today that the defendant himself would be called to testify, and that if he is it will only be for the purpose of proving his insanity.

Wade's attorneys today declined to state positively whether he would take the stand.

Dr. John C. Lynch of Bridgeport and New York, alienist for the State, will be recalled to the stand when the trial is resumed here at 10:30 a. m. tomorrow. He was in the middle of his testimony when adjournment was taken Friday afternoon.

He will be followed by Drs. Godfrey and Stevens of this city, testifying for the prosecution. Dr. A. R. Diefendorf of New Haven and Professor Arnold Gesell of Yale University, specialists employed by Wade's counsel, may take the stand again for brief testimony on subrebuttal.

RECESS HELPS WOMEN.

Unless the defendant takes the stand, the expert testimony will probably close the evidence in the hearing. Attorneys for both sides have indicated that they have no other form of evidence to introduce.

The week-end recess proved a welcome respite to Mrs. Elbert Wade, mother of the accused man, and his wife. The collapse of both during Friday's hearing was due largely to the constant strain which they have been under and friends of the two women said that they had been benefited by relief from the ordeal of the trial.

BANKER LAMONT HAS BUSY DAY AT HARVARD

Thomas W. Lamont, the New York banker, conducted morning prayers today in Appleton Chapel at Harvard. He will be given a dinner late this afternoon in the Union, and afterwards address the members of that organization. Mr. Lamont also attended a meeting of the Harvard board of overseers today. His subject tonight will deal somewhat with conditions in the Orient.

WELLESLEY BLUE LAWS OF GENTLE VARIETY

Wellesley College has its own set of blue laws. Some would construe them as baby blue or Alice blue, however. They taboo "sports," but don't prevent snowshoeing or skating. They prevent picnicking and the use of musical instruments, but allow piano playing between 12:30 and 3 and 5 and 7. If students go motoring outside the village a chaperone must go along.

MORE LEADERS OF INDUSTRY

Edwin Wildman, editor and author of note, is now at work on the manuscript of "Famous Leaders of Industry," second series, which the Page Company have scheduled for publication this Spring.

Librarians and educators in particular and the great public in general heartily approved of Mr. Wildman's first book on "Famous Leaders of Industry," which is perhaps the raison d'etre for the second series, which will include men of international reputation such as Andrew Carnegie and Herbert Hoover and even the great national game of baseball gets in its inning and is represented by a complete account of the life and career of Charles A. Comiskey, "the Noblest Roman of them all," who is the popular president of the Chicago White Sox.

Famous Old Recipe for Cough Syrup

Easily and cheaply made at home, but it beats them all for quick results.

Thousands of housewives have found that they can save two-thirds of the money usually spent for cough preparations, by using this well-known old recipe for making cough syrup. It is simple and cheap but it has no equal for prompt results. It takes right hold of a cough and gives immediate relief, usually stopping an ordinary cough in 24 hours or less.

Get 2½ ounces of Pinex from any druggist, pour it into a pint bottle, and add plain granulated sugar syrup to make a full pint. If you prefer, use clarified molasses, honey, or corn syrup, instead of sugar syrup. Either way, it tastes good, keeps perfectly, and lasts a family a long time.

It's truly astonishing how quickly it acts, penetrating through every air passage of the throat and lungs—loosens and raises the phlegm, soothes and heals the membranes, and gradually but surely the annoying throat tickle and dreaded cough disappear entirely. Nothing better for bronchitis, spasmodic croup, hoarseness or bronchial asthma.

Pinex is a special and highly concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract known the world over for its healing effect on membranes.

Avoid disappointment by asking your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex" with full directions and don't accept anything else. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money promptly refunded. The Pinex Co., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

JAMAICAN PROVERBS QUAINT

America may be the home of slang—or at least the birthplace of it—but wherever human beings exist, and talk to one another, the proverb forms a part of the native dialogue.

Inasmuch as a proverb is merely a pithy or "snappy" way of presenting a well-known truth, proverbs of every clime run much in the same vein. For, be he black or brown, yellow or red, or be he, indeed, white, man has, after all, pretty much the same weaknesses, desires and vanities.

JAMAICAN PROVERBS.

Harry A. Franck has written another most interesting "travelogue" book entitled "Roaming Through the West Indies," in which he brings us in intimate touch with peoples of whom we have read much but understand little.

The proverb, being a sort of universal expression of thought in varying form it is interesting to read some of the proverbs in common usage by the natives of African Jamaica. Some of these, taken from Mr. Franck's book, are given below; they form an interesting comparison with our own new and time-worn proverbs of the English tongue:

"Cock crow 'trongest 'pon him own dung'll."

"Dog hab too much owner him sleep widout supper."

"Ebery man know where him house a leak."

"Follow fashin mek monkey cut him tail."

"Get a quattie (three half-pennies) better dan a kick."

"Larn te dance a home befo' y'u go outside."

"Same ting sweet mout' hu't belly."

"Too much cousin broke shop."

"Ebery dog tink himself lion in him massa yard."

"Man no done grow mus'n laugh afteh short man."

"Runnin' 'bout too much de ruin ob woman an' fowl."

A NURSEMAID'S STORY.

"Folk lore (in African Jamaica," says Mr. Franck, "shows evidence of English and African mixture. Here is a story told by our son's Jamaican nursemaid, without the inimitable pronunciation:

"One day a gentleman and lady have two girl. And they sent them out to look for granny. When them got in thick wood and them met with orangootang. The orangootang axed them where them going to. 'I am going to look for my granny.' And said, 'Here is my granny.' And them said, 'No, you is not my granny. My granny got a mark right on her mout.'

"And he went in thick wood took a knife scrape off him mout and come out and said, 'Here is your granny now.' And he took dem and carry dem in him house and just half cook de food dat carry for dem granny. And when night come him eat off de middle of de biggest one and lef only de hand and de head and de feet. And de little one said, 'Granny, let I go outside.' And he said go and de smallest one run home and can't talk till three days. And de father get twelve men and gone look for de orangootang and put him into de cage and when six mont' come he throw kerosene oil on him and light him a fire."

MIXED IN GRAMMAR.

Undoubtedly the above is the native version of "Little Red Riding Hood." "Tenses mean nothing to the uneducated Jamaican," says Mr. Franck, "and the subjective and objective pronouns are more likely to be reversed than not. Between the plural and singular of either verb or noun he shows an engaging impartiality, while the double negative is to him a form of emphasis."

Mr. Franck is kind enough not to add that this use of the double negative is interesting inasmuch as it is such a common failing in America as to be considered almost inexcusable. And we hurl double superlatives and conditional superlatives with utter abandon.

No other writer in America has Mr. Franck's experience in traveling about the world, "vagabonding it" he calls it, meeting new people on the basis of a fellow worker or pastimer as the case may be and getting the point of view and unpolished mannerisms of the native of these many lands and climes.

A FAMILY JOURNEY.

In his previous books Mr. Franck has written about journeys taken alone and generally afoot. But this time, walking from one of the West Indies to another being moist even with rubbers on, any journeying about those islands being fit travel only for a tree abiding monkey, Mr. Franck has traveled by boat and train. There is another reason, Mr. Franck took a newly acquired wife with him on the journey and the two of them brought back a newly acquired son.

But Mr. Franck's abandoning of his feet as means of locomotion has by no means lessened his ability to get at the heart of things. "Roaming Through the West Indies" is a splendid piece of writing outside of its value as a travelogue. Truth is stranger than fiction, and Mr. Franck sets down these true narratives of the lands through which he journeys in such gripping style as to have all the interesting qualities of a splendid piece of fiction—with the added interest of being truths.

Despite the fact that Mr. Franck took a wife along this time, he did not leave his camera at home. The result is that his book is again replete with interesting photographs selected from the thousands which he snapped. We were a bit put out that he didn't print at least one of those snapshots which we know he must have taken of his proud off-spring. Most of us would have filled half of the book with them.

CORCORAN'S NEW NOVEL HERE SOON

Brewer Corcoran, the Bay State author, has again turned his talents fictionwards and has written a bully novel of the "sword and buckler" type, modernized.

He has christened it "The Princess Naida" and the Page Company, who are Mr. Corcoran's regular publishers, have the novel in process of manufacture and plan to put the book before Author Corcoran's admiring public about the first of February.

HYSTERIA OF LADY MACBETH

Lots of people have written "nut" books about the well-known leading ladies of Shakespeare. Hence when we glimpse a title like that given by Dr. Isador H. Coriat to his just-published brochure, "The Hysteria of Lady Macbeth," we heave a sigh coupled with a "here's another."

The long-suffering student of Shakespeare approaches this little book with misgiving, but as he reads he becomes more tolerant and at the finish, while perhaps not convinced of all of Dr. Coriat's explanations of the famous night-walking scene, he is at least satisfied that he has read a most interesting addition to the scientific criticism of Shakespeare.

Briefly Dr. Coriat holds that Lady Macbeth "is not the victim of a blind fate or destiny or punished by a moral law, but affected by a mental disease." This disease, he maintains, is hysteria, due to two innate causes, which he carefully works out as "Repressed complexes" originating in childlessness and ambition. The whole of the sleepwalking scene is put down as an exhibition of hysterical somnabulism.

Incidentally, Dr. Coriat advances the startling view that in this much-discussed scene Lady Macbeth is really not asleep at all, but is in a separate state of consciousness in which she is compelled to review all the murders in which she and Macbeth have been implicated.

It is an interesting little book and throws light from new angles upon one of the world's great tragedies.

"HAPPY HOUSE" A JOY BOOK

In these turbulent days when nations go about with a chip on their shoulder and coal hogs and rent hogs and "cost-plus" government projects have Mr. Every Day Man wondering what it's all about and how he is going to look after the smoke has cleared away, a book that is full of sunshine, human love and good will is most welcome.

"Happy House," by Jane D. Abbott, is a story of two girls and their relatives. One is quiet and the other vivacious. The vivacious one goes to visit a staid aunt by mistake, the quiet sister having been the one intended to make the visit. How the aunt's gloomy home is flooded with the sunshine of human happiness through the presence of Nancy furnishes a most interesting story. And, of course, Nancy's love affair with her farmer sweetheart runs along through the pages to a successful conclusion.

"MISSY" FULL OF GIRL PRANKS

What the male juvenile mind, as expressed through the antics of Penrod, forgot to do in the way of pranks and ingenious escapes from difficult predicaments, Missy accomplishes. Missy, let it be known, is really Melissa Merriam, the young miss about who the story under the title of her nickname is written by Dana Gatlin. Those of us who have laughed at the irrepressible Penrod, who was given to the public by Booth Tarkington, will likewise laugh at "Missy."

"Missy" will touch your heart and arouse your sense of humor. She is a thoroughly American miss, who travels at aeronautic speed and makes fun or trouble for everyone who chances to get into her pathway.

"POOR MAN'S ROCK" IS MASTERLY

Jack McCrae came back from the war glad that peace had finally come. But his peace of mind was only temporary, for he found himself suddenly plunged into a bitter fight for revenge. Then he began to think. And he came forth after the great pot of experience had boiled long and turbulently, a strong, good man.

Jack McCrae is the character about which Bertrand W. Sinclair had built his latest novel, "Poor Man's Rock," by far the best work from the writer's pen which has, as yet, reached the public. The theme is handled in a masterly way and though thoroughly interesting, the book has a decided purpose and also an instructive value, the latter in-so-far as concerns the salmon industry.

WAS NOT AN "IST."

Like thousands of other vigorous, happy-go-lucky and generous young men, McCrae had unconsciously cherished the firm conviction that a country worth living for was worth dying for, and, like most of those others, he did not bother to call this response an ideal.

He was not one of the numerous ists, or if he was he never knew it. It did not occur to him to question motives, leastwise his own, which is quite possible, especially if a fellow is twenty and if most of his life has been spent marking time on Squitty Island.

And so when distant rumbling guns cast their echoes across the Atlantic it was the most natural thing in the world for McCrae to leave the father who had worked and planned for him under the brown, kelp-fringed cliffs of Squitty and accept the favored cup the gods offered—the air service.

OFF TO FRANCE.

That got him off to France promptly. And he distinguished himself, so he got—a ribbon! That was by way of recognition. By way of experience he achieved lots of things, chiefly pugnacity, the logical aftermath of war.

What else could have been expected after he had learned to "kill men 10,000 feet in the air and watch them fall?"

Besides, he arrived to find his father dying and his rightful inheritance lost through the continued malign and vindictive pressure of a cannery operator. Is it any wonder that this particular Tommy Atkins refused to subscribe to the belief that "the meek shall inherit the earth?" he resembled Kipling's in that he wasn't a fool. He saw.

LIFE REAL TO HIM.

McCrae had no transcendental mind. Life was very real to him, and because he had never been analytical before he trembled lest he might become morbid or, worse, be dubbed a Bolshevik.

But he was a canny, long-headed, silent Scot, with a peculiar bulldog tenacity of purpose, the bulldog tenacity of which had been well nourished in France. So that when he decided to put a crimp in the salmon industry he did, only he nursed his hatred to such lusty growth that it well-nigh put a crimp in his soul.

But Betty was a vigilant young woman; she wanted what she wanted whole—and she got it! And at the same time McCrae learned that even seemingly smug and bloated bondholders have their troubles.

POOR MAN'S ROCK. By Bertrand W. Sinclair. Little, Brown & Co. $1.90.

HUDSON IN PLEASING TALE

Many a family is experiencing a fight between the ancient traditions and the irrepressible spirit of youth. Young men of 1920 and young women of 1921 are doing things pretty much "on their own hook." Henry Hudson 2nd, has written a book which he calls "Spendthrift Town."

Naturally, the "town" is New York. Whoever the person is who writes under the pseudonym of "Henry Hudson 2d," he knows New York with all its undercurrents which are forever tugging people out of their natural channels.

A BREEZY STORY.

"Spendthrift Town" is a breezy story which deals with a comfortable sort of a family which resides in a comfortable house in the vicinity of Washington square.

There are two uncles in business downtown, who are dignified and somewhat ill-tempered. They are George and Edward Nicholson.

Then we have Jamies, a nephew, who plays the piano and composes songs and who loves New York as only such a young man can.

His sister, Claire, is a go-ahead sort of girl, also a product of "Spendthrift Town," who aids and abets Jamie and is one of the few persons in the establishment who tries to find some excuse for him when he gets drunk and shocks the uncles.

Eventually one of the uncles turns out to have been stealing the property of the younger members, whose trustee he is, and there is a general break-up.

Then Claire proves her innate worth by becoming a nurse in a hospital, and in the concluding chapters we know that she is going to France to do her part as so many American girls did in those days.

HINT AT DISGUISE.

There is a mild love interest and an occasional dramatic episode neatly set forth. But the real strength of the story is in the vivid picture it presents of certain phases of metropolitan life, which will be appreciated by New Yorkers as well as by those who know little of the great city.

The publishers say that behind the pseudonym of "Henry Hudson 2d" there "lurks a very active minded and observant personality—a well-known New Yorker who is qualified in every way to write a convincing novel of the great 'Spendthrift Town.'"

That is exactly what he has done.

Spendthrift Town. By Henry Hudson 2d. Houghton, Mifflin Co. $2.25.

BETTER THAN CALOMEL

Thousands Have Discovered Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets are a Harmless Substitute

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets—the substitute for calomel—are a mild but sure laxative, and their effect on the liver is almost instantaneous. These little olive-colored tablets are th result of Dr. Edwards' determination not to treat liver and bowel complaints with calomel.

The pleasant little tablets do the good that calomel does, but have no bad after effects. They don't injure the teeth like strong liquids or calomel. They take hold of the trouble and quickly correct it. Why cure the liver at the expense of the teeth? Calomel sometimes plays havoc with the gums. So do strong liquids. It is best not to take calomel. Let Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets take its place.

Headaches, "dullness" and that lazy feeling come from constipation and a disordered liver. Take Dr Edwards' Olive Tablets when you feel "logy" and "heavy." They "clear" clouded brain and "perk up" the spirits. 15c and 30c.

McFEE'S NEW STORY OF SEA

William McFee has produced another great novel. Score two for him. Those who read "Casuals of the Sea" proclaimed the author a new member of the exclusive circle of great novelists and then hoped he would not back-slide on his next piece of work. He came through recently with "Captain Macedoine's Daughter," and the critics are pleased to accord him the palm once more.

One of the chief features of Mr. McFee's work is that he writes about real people. He writes about a subject with which he is thoroughly conversant and never falls into the habits of cheap fiction writers of putting in a lot of cheap sentimentality that one finds only in wishy-washy fiction.

If you would know the seamen of England, if you would read a tale of real hard-working two-fisted men and two-fisted women, read this book of Mr. McFee's which deals with Captain Macedoine and his alluring daughter. It is another triumph for a great novelist.

Can You "Whip Your Weight In Wild Cats"—Are You A Strong Red Blooded American?

That knows neither FEAR NOR FAILURE or a pale thin watery blooded man—WEAK, NERVOUS and IRRITABLE?

Think of the IRON FORCE, the grim determination and the MIGHTY COURAGE shown by the man in this picture. A pale thin watery blooded man would have probably turned and fled and been devoured by the beasts, just as SUCH A MAN IS OVERCOME AND DEVOURED BY REVERSES IN BUSINESS, HARD TIMES, by an attack of ill health or disaster of any kind.

With an IRON WILL, backed by plenty of iron in your blood, you are ready to tackle any job—nothing can stop you—but without it, you worry, fret and "stew," you are full of excuses and tales of bad luck but this does not bring home the "Cash." Don't try to "fool yourself" into thinking you are "a man of blood and iron" when you have good reason to suspect that you are not. Consider the SIZE OF YOUR BANK BALANCE and what SUCCESS you have had in life.

In the West a few years ago, a strong keen red-blooded man who was always ready to face any danger, who never thought of FEAR OR FAILURE, was often referred to as a man who could "Whip His Weight in Wild Cats."

In those days historians even wrote of us as a nation of RED-BLOODED AMERICANS but today about one person out of every three is said to suffer more or less from malnutrition or lack of sufficient nourishment which is caused NOT by lack of food but often by LACK OF SUFFICIENT IRON in the blood to enable us to GET THE STRENGTH out of our food.

FOOD IS WORTH NOTHING UNLESS YOU GET THE STRENGTH AND NOURISHMENT OUT OF IT. In fact it often happens that the more you eat the more you starve as your digestive organs are unable to handle much food, when your blood LACKS IRON and you often think you have stomach trouble when it isn't that at all—SIMPLY EAT LESS AND TAKE IRON.

OUR FOREFATHERS ATE COARSE FOODS; the husks of grains, the skins of vegetables, and fruits which are RICH IN IRON but modern cookery throws all these things away—hence the alarming increase in IRON STARVATION OF THE BLOOD and its attendant ills.

Without iron your blood not only loses its power to change food into living cells and tissue but it can no longer carry oxygen to your brain. Without oxygen your brain becomes dull and heavy; your memory poor; your will power weak; you make bad decisions; things always seem to turn out wrong; you are often overcome by an overpowering sense of fear and failure. All the "fight" and "go-ahead" in you is taken out—A MAN IS ONLY PART OF A MAN WHEN HIS BLOOD LACKS IRON. When you get no feeling tired in the morning, when you find yourself nervous irritable and easily upset; when you can no longer do your day's work without being all fagged out at night or have pains across the back and your face looks pale and drawn do not wait until you go all to pieces and collapse in a state of nervous prostration or until in your weakened condition you contract some serious disease but take some organic iron like NUXATED IRON at once to help enrich your blood and revitalize your wornout exhausted nerves. Organic Nuxated Iron often increases the bodily and mental vigor of weak, tired, wornout, nervous people in two weeks' time. It's like the iron in your blood and like the iron in spinach, lentils and apples. You can even eat it if you wish. It will not blacken or injure the teeth nor disturb the stomach. It is entirely different from ordinary metallic iron which people usually take, and which is made merely by the action of strong acids on small pieces of iron.

Beware of substitutes. Look for the word "NUXATED" on every package and the letters N. I. on every tablet.

Your money will be refunded by the manufacturers if you do not obtain perfectly satisfactory results. At all druggists.

ADVERTISE YOUR "WANTS" IN THE BOSTON AMERICAN

JOHNSON FUND GROWING FAST

Ex-Convict Sends $2 for Family Bereaved in Wood Lot Tragedy; Others Aid

"She needs the kale, God knows."

That's what "Convict 567-Paroled" wrote the editor of the Boston American today when he sent along two brand new $1 bills to be added the fund raised for Mrs. John Johnson, widow of the Quincy woodcutter who was slain in Cunningham's woods on Wednesday last.

And that's what exactly nine-tenths of the population of Quincy, headed by Mayor William A. Bradford, thinks. Quincy will do its bit for Mrs. Johnson and the two fatherless children in the Grove street home. Already plans are under way which assure them of a comfortable existence.

Tonight at the Alhambra Theatre the Johnson Fund Committee, of which Mayor Bradford is the head, will hold a meeting. Plans for the big benefit performance of Friday night will be discussed and also other plans made to help the family so suddenly bereaved.

The morning mail for the editor of the Boston American brought the letter from "567" today. In a postscript "567" sets forth that he's working in a bank, hence the new money. His donation to the fund will be forwarded to the stricken family, as will any other contributions which may be received by this newspaper.

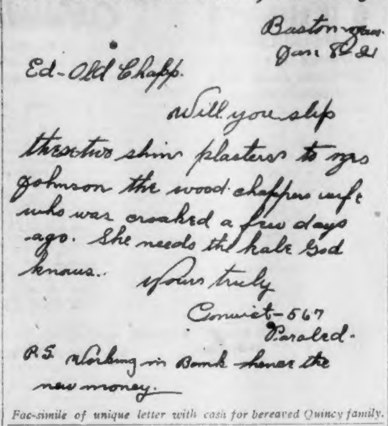

In addition to Mayor Bradford, the members of the committee are: Rev. Leander Hokenson, Adolph Sandberg, John Clark, William H. Teasdale, Fred B. Murphy and Myer Winer. Winer represents the Quincy Chamber of Commerce, which is doing its utmost for the fund.

The benefit Friday night will be held in the Alhambra Theatre, donated for the occasion by Manager Fred B. Murphy. Tickets for the benefit are being sold during performances at both the Alhambra and Strand Theatres as well as at the Quincy Theatre and Music Hall.

Quincy Lodge of Elks will hold a benefit at the Quincy Theatre on Sunday night. Ave Maria Council, Knights of Columbus, has also voted to stage a benefit entertainment at a date to be named later.

Chief of Police Goodhue has received several contributions to the fund, including one from Providence signed "Friend." The enclosure was $20 and the writer stated he had learned of the fund through reading the Boston newspapers. Other contributions have been made direct to Mrs. Johnson.

FRANKLIN MANUFACTURER SEES BUSINESS BOOM

Franklin, Jan. 10.—Further reduction and stabilization of prices during the next six months will be followed by an upward trend in business, President William C. Buchman of the Franklin Business Men's Association and manager of a large local factory, stated in his annual report.

WOMEN'S CLUB LEADER WILL HAVE BUSY WEEK

Mrs. George Minot Baker of Concord, president of the State Federation of Women's Clubs, has a busy week, in her official capacity, and her itinerary for the week includes four dates. This afternoon, she spoke before the Concord Massachusetts Woman's Club, of which she is a former president. She will visit the Lawrence Woman's Club, tomorrow afternoon, and the Salem Woman's Club, Wednesday. On Thursday she will be the guest of the Woman's Auxiliary Railway Associates.

THREE DROWNED AT HOLLISTON

Young Men Make Fatal Attempt to Cross Ice on Lake Winthrop to Camp

Holliston, Jan. 10.—Three Holliston men were drowned here in an attempt to reach their camp on Grapes Island by crossing the thin ice, covering Lake Winthrop. The names of the victims follow:

John Driscoll, aged twenty-two, a crossing tender for the Boston & Albany Railroad, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Driscoll, Union street.

John McGuinness, aged twenty-seven, Y. D. veteran and a prominent athlete, son of Bernard McGuinness, Mechanic street.

Forest Higgins, aged twenty-two, driver for the American Express Company, son of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Higgins.

The tragedy was discovered by Daniel Driscoll, brother of one of the victims. He motored from his home around the lake to the camp, where he told the trio he would meet them.

Alarmed by their absence he walked to the lake shore. A cap and hat floating on the surface of an open space of water furnished the clue to the fate of his brother and companion.

Members of the fire department were called to the scene and they set out on the lake in rowboats and with grappling irons. The bodies of all three were recovered.

SEVEN INJURED IN AUTO CRASH

Doctor and Minister Among Victims of Roxbury Motor Smashup; Driver Held

Two men were seriously injured and five others cut and bruised when an auto overturned and another car crashed into it on Columbus avenue, near Dimock street, Roxbury, opposite the New England State Hospital, where the victims were given first aid treatment.

Dr. Paul Emerson of No. 86 Bay State road, Back Bay, and the Rev. H. W. Swann, colored, of No. 702 Columbus avenue, Roxbury, were the most severely injured.

The others injured are:

J. H. Allston, No. 18 Wellington street, Allston, bruises and cuts about the head and body; Charles Wilson, Allston, injuries to head and side; and Albert A. Wilson, scalp wound and injuries to side and body.

Samuel A. Nation of No. 148 Camden street, Roxbury, driver of the larger machine, which contained six men, was held by the police pending an investigation.

POLICE IN LOCOMOTIVE HUNTING 3 HOLDUP MEN

Kearney, N. J., Jan. 10.—The police rifle squad in a locomotive of the Pennsylvania Railroad are searching the Jersey meadows for three armed gunmen who robbed a switch towerman of 75 cents and then riddled the tower with bullets angered by the small amount gained for their efforts.

TRADE UNION COLLEGE PLANS WINTER COURSE

Harvard and Technology professors will conduct courses during the Winter term of the Trade Union College, begining tonight. Elementary, intermediate and advance sections in English composition have been arranged. The public will be admitted free of charge to lectures on the first and third Thursdays of each month. Lillian M. Watts has charge of a course on recreation.

2 DIE AFTER PAWN OF COAT TO BUY FATAL DRINK

Newark, N. J., Jan. 10.—A deadly beverage, made with wood alcohol, which Michael Brown of New York and William H. Massey of New Brighton, Pa., purchased by pawning an overcoat, is believed by the authorities to have been the cause of their deaths here. Two other men were found violently ill after drinking the stuff.

Get rid of that catarrh while you can

Catarrh gets to be a habit.
For goodness sake, don't get used to it.

Never be content to live on in that way—sleeping with mouth open, waking with that bad taste, coughing and spitting all day, an easy mark for colds and every epidemic of throat trouble that comes along.

Try Kondon's Catarrhal Jelly, used and esteemed for thirty years for clearing heads, soothing angry membranes and relieving Catarrh. It is a valued household remedy in thousands of American homes. Better than camphorated oil for children.

Send for free 20 treatment tin

A tin (large enough for 20 applications) will be mailed, to you free of charge, on receipt of your name and address. Address T. N. KENYON KONDON'S Catarrhal Jelly Minneapolis, Minn.

Kondon's Catarrhal Jelly is guaranteed not only by us, but by 30 years service to millions of Americans. If Kondon's doesn't do wonders for your cold, sneezing, cough, chronic catarrh, nose-bleed headache, sore nose, etc.—we'll pay your money back. On sale at all drug stores.

Avoid substitutes—make sure this signature is on the package you buy. T. N. Kenyon from Cochrane on the chance of intercepting the party have sent word that the trail along the Abitibi River is in treacherous condition.

AIRMEN HELD UP BY BAD TRAILS

Continued Delay in Arrival of Naval Balloonists Cause Some Anxiety

The river is full of rapids and at many places the covering of slush and snow is not supported by solid ice underneath. Even the experienced Indian runners were fooled by some of the "soft spots."

However, bad weather is being taken into consideration and it is recognized that the fresh snowstorm which has been prevailing north of Mattice would hold up the party to some extent.

There was keen disappointment when the men did not arrive Sunday afternoon. It is not yet definitely known whether the party will arrive at Cochrane or Mattice but barring serious accident of any sort it is felt that they will certainly arrive before Tuesday night or Wednesday at the very latest.

WILL BE "ARRESTED".

The time consumed by the balloonists in reaching the railway line from Moose Factory has already exceeded the record. They have now been on the way for two weeks. Ordinarily the trip is made in 12 days.

If the balloonists come into Mattice they will find a brawny member of the Canadian police waiting to put them under arrest on the technical charge of landing in the uniform of a foreign nation at a place otherwise than those designated in the international agreement for aircraft.

But it will be a friendly proceeding. It is expected that the men will be released as soon as Lieutenant Kloor in charge of the party, explains that the balloon was carried out of its route by storms.

Boston Shipping Life "a Sorry Contrast"

Compared with the shipping activities of other less favorably situated ports on this coast, Boston presents "a sad contrast," Charles F. Dutch, admiralty consul and general solicitor for the United States Shipping Board, told an audience in the Old South Meeting House forum.

Dutch, who is lecturer on maritime law at Harvard, stated Boston is using only 30 to 40 per cent. of her facilities. He pointed to the fact that this city is one day nearer Great Britain than other ports on the coast, yet possessed none of the shipping initiative found in New York, Baltimore and Philadelphia.

He urged the government to subsidize private shipping interests.

NEW ENGLAND CLUB'S FOX HUNT NEXT WEEK

The New England Fox Hunters' Club will hold its 16th annual Winter meet next week, at Milford. Headquarters will be at the Mansion House. On Tuesday, January 18, the annual club dinner will be held.

ASK FUNDS TO AID IRELAND

Boycott on British-Made Goods Also Urged at Mass Meetings

Donations to aid the suffering people of Ireland were asked of those in attendance at about 125 mass meetings held through Massachusetts under the auspices of the American Association for the Recognition of the Irish Republic. They are to be sent to Joseph O'Neill, president of the Federal Trust Company, Boston.

Appeals were also made by the speakers at many of these meetings for their hearers to refrain from buying British manufactured articles and also to discontinue the investment of American dollars in British concerns or other companies having a British alliance.

Great enthusiasm was manifested at mass meetings in St. Peter's Hall, Cambridge; Municipal building, South Boston; the Michael Davitt Council in Paine Memorial Hall, and in Lynn.

At many meetings Eamon De Valera and the other elected representatives of the Irish people were cheered and votes of confidence in them accorded.

TWELVE DROWN WHEN EXCURSION BOAT SINKS

Melbourne, Australia, Jan. 10.—Twelve passengers on an excursion steamship were drowned when the vessel sank in Hopkins River at Warrnambool, Victoria. There were eighty persons on board bound for a picnic.

300 Animals Moving to $75,000 Home

Tomorrow will be moving day in Jungle Town, when several lions, leopard and a hyena will be transferred from their present domicile in Franklin Park Zoo to a new and costly structure 200 yards away.

The zoo officials will put the animal cages on drays, and although the distance is short, it is expected that the work will take some time, owing to the care with which the cages must be handled.

The new homes of these animals is the last word in houses of that kind, and was erected at a cost of about $75,000.

BEECKMAN AND HARDING TO CONFER AT MARION

Newport, Jan. 10.—Former-Governor R. Livingston Beeckman will leave next Wednesday for Marion, O., where he will confer with President-elect Harding. Later he will go to Santa Barbara, Cal., where he will visit his three sisters. He will return to Providence about March 1 and will probably go to Washington to the inauguration. "Next Summer I hope to go to South America, returning to Rhode Island in time for Thanksgiving," he said.

WORCESTER MAN DIES AFTER TAKING POISON

Worcester, Jan. 10.—Albert Watson, thirty-one years old, of No. 40 Windsor street, is dead at the City Hospital following an overdose of poison taken during a fit of despondency several days ago.

KIDNAP DETROIT R. R. MANAGER

City Laborers Then Lay Municipal Tracks Across Those of United Company

Detroit, Jan. 10.—After T. J. Burdick, assistant general manager of the Detroit United Railway, had been virtually kidnaped, 100 city laborers, guarded by 200 police officers, laid the tracks of the new municipal street railway across those of the United Company.

An injunction issued by Judge Dingeman, restraining the city from crossing the tracks, was in the possession of Burdick, but he was prevented from enforcing it by the action of the police, following his demand on Joseph S. Goodwin, manager of the municipal system, that the work be halted.

Burdick was taken across the Belle Isle drawbridge on a charge of disturbing the peace, but was prevented from returning to the city by the action of the drawtender, who refused to close the draw.

KERENSKY WANTS ALLIES TO STAY OUT OF RUSSIA

Paris, Jan. 10. — Public protest against any armed intervention in Russia by the allies will be made Monday by Kerensky, presiding at a meeting of the Russian constitutional assembly in Paris. At the same time the assembly will go on record as approving the fomenting by propaganda or otherwise of armed revolt against the Soviets within Russia.

Disrobing Wax Figures Offends Pastor

Los Angeles, Jan. 10.—Here is a problem for the police:

Should the wax figures of women in the display windows of the downtown stores be dressed and undressed behind drawn curtains?

According to a delegation of women and the secretary of a Los Angeles minister who called at the police station to discuss this new phase of morals, the wax models should be carefully screened from public view when their handsome garments are changed.

According to members of the delegation, crowds are accustomed to gather in front of the windows when the clothing is removed from the wax rivals of Venus eD Milo and the manikins, of womankind, as they might be termed, are put to bed for the night.

Frequently the wax models are entirely denuded of clothing, gowns, corsets, Teddy Bears and all the rest of feminine finery being removed, and the big crowds seem to enjoy the disrobing scenes, the ministers complained.

HARDING INVITED TO SUMMER IN MAINE

Portland, Me., Jan. 10.—Representations have been made to President-elect Warren G. Harding to spend the coming Summer at York Harbor. It is known the President-elect is in favor of spending the Summer in this part of the country and every convenience for his party has been made if he chooses to come here.

Ex-Newsboy Cabinet Members' Secretary

From newsboy to private secretary of a cabinet member, and still less than 21 years old, is the experience of Isidor Shaffer, whose home is at No. 157 Saratoga street, East Boston. His appointment to the confidential position with John Barton Payne, Secretary of the Interior, has just been announced. He is the first boy under it to hold such a position.

Young Shaffer sold newspapers in Central Square, East Boston, while he was attending the Chapman Grammar School and the East Boston High School. He took a course in stenography at the latter and graduated in June, 1917. In December of that year he received a position in Washington as stenographer for the United States Food Administration. He held similar positions with the railroad administration and shipping board.

WASHBURN TO MAKE REPLY

Will Answer Bank Head When He Reaches "Manikin Class," He Says

Robert M. Washburn, candidate for collector of the port of Boston, again replies to the allegation of President W. F. Landers of the Mattapan National Bank that he was paid for his services in securing the deposit of State funds in that institution by saying:

"Mr. Landers' statement is grossly inaccurate and will be taken care of in due course, when I reach the manikin class."

This after Mr. Washburn, it is stated, had been told that Mr. Landers had exhibited a cancelled check for $800 and two bills from Mr. Washburn for "prof. services."

KIWANIS CLUB TO BOOM HOOVER FUND

Albert Edmund Brown, who is said to have been the only man the National Republican Convention at Chicago would sing for, will be the guest of the Kiwanis Club of Boston at the Boston City Club tomorrow night. Fred Cullen, one of the war-time four-minute talkers, will speak on behalf of the European Relief Commission. An appeal has been sent out to members of the club to subscribe to the fund for the relief of European children.

NEW ENGLAND TRADE REVIEW

Greater Distribution Need of Fish Industry

P. R. Duffy Says Production Has Exceeded Demand and Efforts Should Be Made to Send Food to Remoter Places; Predicts 1921 Will Be Prosperous

By P. R. DUFFY,
President Colonial Fisheries, Ltd.

We have entered a new year, and business men who have a broad vision predict that 1921 will be a very prosperous one for all industries in this country. I firmly believe that the fish industry, like other industries, has seen its worst period.

I firmly believe that the period through which the fishing industry is passing is one that in the future will bear fruit. Like all other industries, during the war it was a comparatively easy matter to sell all the fish that could be caught, but since the armistice was signed the quantity of fish produced has been increased while the demand has decreased, to a certain extent, with the result that those who are engaged in the fishing industry, as in all other industries, have found it a little more difficult to do business than has been their experience for a few years.

NEED BETTER DISTRIBUTION.

It will be necessary—and the writer is of the opinion that steps are now being taken—to reorganize the industry and put it on a little different basis than heretofore. The writer believes that the Commonwealth of Massachusetts will soon realize that the fishing industry is of great importance and will lend every assistance possible to create a bigger and better business. The writer also feels that the United States government, through the efforts of the Bureau of Fisheries at Washington, will lend assistance to the industry that will materially assist in making it a broader and bigger enterprise.

After careful analysis is made of the fishing industry it will be found that from a production standpoint there is being produced a larger quantity of fish than heretofore, but that the distribution of this fish to the country at large has been sadly neglected; that is to say, no real, concentrated effort has been made to broaden this distribution. Everyone in the fish business has depended upon the ordinary wholesaler to distribute his fish to the regular retail stores that have been established for some time.

The fishing industry needs a great deal of publicity, and ways and means should be devised to encourage every housekeeper to use to a greater extent fish as food each day. Plans are now being made by men in the industry who have studied the situation and realize the growing need of greater distribution to complete plans to carry on work of this kind, so that within a period of a year or two the people of the United States will know more about fish and will use it to a far greater extent, as the result of the campaigns that are now being planned.

TASTY FISH FOOD.

Thousands of people have expressed a desire to use fish to a greater extent, but have claimed that they could not get fish served to them in the right manner and at the right price.

The writer has been told by a large number of people that when ordering fish at some of the better hotels, restaurants, etc., the prices charged were far in excess of what they felt they should really pay, and in some cases where investigation has been made this has been found to be true.

If the hotels and restaurants would pay a little closer attention to the serving of fish as food and serve good fish at moderate prices, they could greatly increase their business on this article of food.

CARE IN HANDLING.

Greater care is now being given to the treatment and handling of fish as compared to the old days in the fish business. Ways and means are being devised to handle fish without the use of forks. Greater care is being taken of fish that are being put into the freeers, and today there is hardly a fish frozen that is not just as edible as fresh fish taken from the water.

In fact, fish to be shipped any great distance should be shipped in the frozen state, so that when it reaches the consumer the same freshness of the fish can be enjoyed after it has been defrosted in the proper manner, namely, replaced in an ice box and let thaw out in a gradual manner; or it is possible to defrost fish by dipping it in cold water. However, better results are obtained by allowing fish to become defrosted while laying in an ice box.

In conclusion I would say that the outlook for the fish business is really brighter than in some other industries, and I feel that during the course of two or three years the fish business will be of even greater importance to the State of Massachusetts than ever before.

DEVELOPMENT OF FOREIGN TRADE URGED

Fabulous profits may be made by American firms in importing goods from countries where the exchange rate has materially depreciated, according to Mr. Mulveny of W. Mulveny & Co., No. 10 State street, Boston.

"For example," he said, "I have here a thermos bottle, for which, among many other articles, our client company, the Pioneer Company of Boston, has the exclusive rights in North and South America. The Pioneer Company is expanding to cover every important country of the world.

"The United States dollar will buy ten times that amount of German money. If the bottle costs $5 in Germany, 50 cents in United States money will put it free on board and another 50 cents will land it in Boston. The bottle is easily worth $2 wholesale, and that is 100 per cent. profit to the Pioneer Company in ninety days.

"The transaction is financed by use of the United States purchasers' credit, through the bank acceptance, which makes it possible to do business in excess of the capitalization of the company.

"It seems impossible to me that America can do other than go through another business slump about next October, like the one from which we are now emerging, unless we take steps to develop foreign trade to a point sufficient to take care of three or four months of our national production, which cannot be consumed here."

SHOE WORKERS FOR 'BIG UNION'

Delegates at Lynn Convention Vote to Submit Proposal to Union Referendum

One hundred and fifty delegates, representing 50,000 members of independent shoe unions in New England, adopted a resolution at their convention in Lynn to join the "One Big Union" movement and submitted the proposal to the local unions for a referendum vote.

The proposed "one Big Union" of the leather industry will be distinct from that of the textile trades and will not be hostile to the American Federation of Labor, the delegates declared.

Thomas F. Lynch, general secretary and treasurer of the United Shoe Workers of America, who spoke for more than an hour, said that he had just arrived from a meeting of the general executive board at Rochester, N. H., which had gone on record in favor of the "O. B. U."

James E. Rice, business agent of the Shoe Workers' Protective Union of Marblehead, was chairman of the convention. The following resolution, introduced by James Brennan of Lynn, was adopted:

"Resolved, that this conference go on record in favor of the organization of an industrial union composed of workers in the shoe, leather and allied industries and that a committee of five be appointed to meet the general executive boards of the various unions and to confer in regard to the taking of a referendum vote for one big organization."

50,000 NOW PICKING FILM PLAYERS IN $5,000 TEST

Add These Favorites to List of Forty Already Printed in American and Advertiser

This is the twenty-first day of the sixty-day $5,000 Movie Player Identification Test promoted by the Boston American and the Boston Sunday Advertiser in an effort to find the 219 New Englanders who best know the motion picture players.

Test Pictures of the Twenty-first Day, Nos. 41 to 42, will be found on the Picture Page. The gentleman is one of America's most famous players. The girl—she has been doing her hair up only a few years—is one of the most promising.

50,000 ENJOYING TEST.

It probably is a conservative estimate to say that fifty thousand New Englanders are enjoying this Test and making a delightful family game of it. If you got one of yesterday's Boston Sunday Advertisers you obtained in one piece all the forty pictures which appeared up to today and so are equipped to proceed with the Test quite as well as if you had been in from the beginning.

One GREAT advantage of keeping in touch with the Test day by day, however—there are others—is that the pictures are larger. The certain way not to miss a day is to have Mr. Newsdealer save a copy of the Boston American and the Boston Sunday Advertiser for you REGULARLY until the Test is ended and the awards announced. The awards are as follows:

ONE FIRST AWARD	$1,000
ONE SECOND AWARD	750
ONE THIRD AWARD	500
ONE FOURTH AWARD	400
ONE FIFTH AWARD	300
ONE SIXTH AWARD	[illegible]
ONE SEVENTH AWARD	150
ONE EIGHTH AWARD	1[illegible]
ONE NINTH AWARD	50
100 AWARDS OF $10 EACH	1,000
110 AWARDS OF $5 EACH	550
TOTAL	$5,000

HOW TO START.

If this should be your first day in the Test, after obtaining all the back pictures in yesterday's Sunday Advertiser, let us advise you to first identify today's two pictures and then read the Rules of the Test carefully. Thereafter all you need to do is keep in touch with the Pictures. They are printed on week days in this newspaper and on Sundays in the Boston Sunday Advertiser.

The Rules will tell you all you need to know about the Plan but if after reading them you are in doubt concerning any essential matter the Movie Test Editor is at your service. Write to him at No. 80 Summer street, Boston.

Some questions the Movie Test Editor cannot answer and you ought not to ask. A young lady in a State street office, for example, writes to ask whether it is intended to print the picture of any player more than once.

This young lady very thoughtfully encloses a stamped and addressed envelope. To tell her what she wants to know, however, would be telling too much. Certainly to send her the information privately, and not print it here, would be—or so it appears to the writer—unfair to the rest of you.

OPEN TO EVERYBODY.

What we aim at here is a "fair field and no favors." The Test is wide open to everybody in New England, man or woman, boy or girl, excepting persons employed by either of the two newspapers or allied publications and individuals connected in any way with the motion picture industry.

All that is asked of those who compete for one of the 219 cash awards is that they write the names of motion picture players under the pictures as they appear in the Test. The awards will go to those who send in the largest percentages of CORRECT identifications.

If you found it impossible to buy a Boston Sunday Advertiser yesterday in your neighborhood, the Movie Test Editor will be thankful for the details. Write to him about it, giving the name of the dealer or dealers you visited and stating at what time of the day.

Test Pictures Nos. 43 and 44 will appear in tomorrow's Boston American.

New England Theatres Now Co-operating in $5,000 Movie Identity Test

The 280 motion picture theatres which are co-operating with the Boston American and the Boston Sunday Advertiser in their $5,000 quest for the 219 New Englanders best informed as to the appearance of well-known movie players embrace the cream of the playhouses in this part of the country.

In the subjoined list you will find the name of a theatre in your neighborhood which, by reason of the character of the management and the high order of entertainment it provides for its patrons, is worthy of your support at all times. These theatres strive earnestly to give the public the best and latest offerings of Shadowland.

Select YOUR theatre from this list. Here, every day throughout the Movie Player Identification Test, the current test pictures will be shown on the screen at every performance:

MISSING RUSSELL BOY RETURNED TO MOTHER

Three-year-old James Russell, the storm centre of a South Boston controversy during all of last week, has been returned to the home of his mother, Mrs. Mary Moran Russell, at No. 32 G street, South Boston. The lad was returned just as quietly as he was taken away. It is understood that he was at the home of an aunt in Rockland. It is said his father, Joseph W. Russell, after being denied entry to his wife's parents' home when he went to see his two children, took the lad to Rockland.

TYPOS TO SEE PETERS ABOUT GRIEVANCES

At a special meeting of Boston Typographical Union No. 13 arrangements were completed for a conference with Mayor Peters to take place Wednesday in relation to grievances existing at the municipal printing plant and the Public Library. It was also voted to ask the national commission, composed of representatives of the executive council of the International Typographical Union and the American Newspaper Publishers' Association, to hold its next session in Boston.

TRADE UNION GIRLS TO SPEAK AT TEA

A two weeks' educational campaign by the Women's Trade Union League will be open with a tea at the home of Mrs. Arthur G. Rotch, Commonwealth avenue tomorrow afternoon. A number of Trade Union girls will make short speeches. Mrs. Rotch is chairman of the committee in charge of the campaign. There will be a conference Thursday evening at Jacob Sleeper Hall, Boylston and Exeter streets.

DR. DERCUM VISITS WHITE HOUSE AGAIN

WELLESLEY IS TO HEAR TAGORE, HINDU POET

Sir Rabindranath Tagore, Hindu poet and mystic, whose Oriental philosophy has made him one of the fashionable poets of the day, will be heard at Wellesley College tomorrow evening, in the Houghton Memorial Chapel. He is the holder of the Nobel prize and is ranked by William Butler Yeats, the Irish poet, with St. Francis, Thomas a Kempis and William Blake.

SUFFERING CAUSED BY PAY CUTS, SAYS SOCIETY

Suffering is being caused in Greater Boston homes by wage cuts and unemployment, according to the Church Home Relief Society of the Episcopal Church in Massachusetts. Estimates are that 50 per cent. of the children between the ages of fourteen and sixteen who have been working in Massachusetts are now out of work.

TO CELEBRATE BIRTH OF BENJAMIN FRANKLIN

A nationwide appeal for an appropriate celebration of Benjamin Franklin's birthday has been sent out by the New York City Thrift Week Committee. The year 1921, the committee points out, is the 200th anniversary of Franklin's entry into the field of literature. The committee has prepared resolutions calling for an annual celebration of Dr. Franklin's birthday on January 17.

20 CANDIDATES FOR WESTFIELD CITY CLERK

Westfield, Jan. 10.—Twelve candidates have applied for the position of city clerk in the city of Westfield. The City Council will elect one at a meeting on the 20th. The Council is desirious of barring newspapermen from its meetings and is in favor of star chamber sessions. The charter, however, states that all deliberations of the Council shall be public.

DANDERINE
Stops Hair Coming Out: Thickens, Beautifies.

A few cents buys "Danderine." After a few applications you cannot find a fallen hair or any dandruff, besides every hair shows new life, vigor, brightness, more color and abundance.

Use Cocoanut Oil For Washing Hair
If you want to keep your hair in good condition, be careful what you wash it with.
Most soaps and prepared shampoos contain too much alkali. This dries the scalp, makes the hair brittle, and is very harmful. Mulsified cocoanut oil shampoo (which is pure and entirely greaseless), is much better than anything else you can use for shampooing, as this can't possibly injure the hair.
Simply moisten your hair with water and rub it in. One or two teaspoonsful of Mulsified will make an abundance of rich, creamy lather, and cleanses the hair and scalp thoroughly. The lather rinses out easily, and removes every particle of dust, dirt, dandruff and excessive oil. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and it leaves it fine and silky, bright, fluffy and easy to manage.
You can get Mulsified cocoanut oil shampoo at most any drug store. It is very cheap, and a few ounces is enough to last everyone in the family for months. Be sure your druggist gives you Mulsified.—Advertisement.

WHEN MEALS HIT BACK
"Pape's Diapepsin" instantly Ends Indigestion, Sourness, Stomach Acidity
Are lumps of undigested food causing you pain? Is your stomach acid, gassy, sour, or have you flatulence, heartburn? Then take Pape's Diapepsin.
Just as soon as you eat a tablet or two of Pape's Diapepsin all that dyspepsia, indigestion and stomach distress caused by acidity ends. These pleasant, harmless tablets of Pape's Diapepsin never fail to make sick, upset stomachs feel fine at once, and they cost very little at drug stores.

Oils and Steels React at the Outset; Shipping Issues Up at Noon

By W. H. ROSS,
Financial Editor.

Stocks were weak in New York at noon, but well above the morning lowest, there having been a second hour rally in which shipping shares figured. Oils and steels were among issues to stand out in the recovery. Crucible showed more than a point gain after being down more than two. Central Leather also made a marked advance. Hide and Leather preferred was strong. Atlantic Gulf remained the weakest stock, but regained some ground. Among issues to show the largest losses during the forenoon were Mexican Petroleum, Stromberg, Sears Roebuck, U. S. Rubber and Royal Dutch. At their lowest they were off from two to more than four points.

The stock market was active, first hour transactions aggregating more than 260,000 shares. Call money opened at 7 per cent. In the foreign exchange market, demand sterling made a good gain and opened at $3.65½, but Continental rates were irregular as to changes.

WEAK AT OPENING.

Themarket had a weak opening and grew weaker. Atlantic Gulf was the feature of early trading, it starting with a decline of more than three points and within fifteen minutes showing a loss of nearly six. Oils and steels receded from the outset and some of the coppers were conspicuous in the downward movement, including Inspiration and Anaconda. Rails eased off, while shipping shares were comparatively firm. Little was done in leathers and sugars, although Central Leather was among weakest issues. Tires sold to a lower level. Motors had a rather strong beginning but joined in the general decline. Atlantic Gulf and Mexican Petroleum were under the greatest pressure, however.

It was a profession market in all respects. The "January rise" has not impressed the public much evidently. Most of the buying from this source is by small investors. At the end of an hour the market was still weak, but prices were above the lowest level. Some stocks were above their level. Some stocks were above their port as to the Federal Reserve system's reserve ratio, its standing 46.4 against 45.4 for the week before, had little influence upon security valuations. The money situation is improving faster than business.

RAILS DISAPPOINTING.

The halt in the advance of railroad stocks indicates disappointment over earning reports. Those for November which have been received by the Interstate Commerce Commission were no more satisfactory than September and October returns. It is estimated that the operating income of Class 1 roads for November will total about $55,000,000, whereas to earn 6 per cent. annually upon the calculated railway investment their net should be not less than $99,598,000 for a month. Returns already at hand indicate that with higher rates in force roads did not earn in November more than 3½ per cent. on their property investment. October net was at the rate of 4.60 per cent. and September net at the rate of 4.13 per cent. But the poor showing for November was partly because of a decreased movement of merchandise and miscellaneous tonnage upon which the roads are allowed comparatively high freight rates.

Chicago More Thrifty

Increased thrift in Chicago is claimed by prohibitionists as due to the dry law, and it is shown by increased deposits in savings banks. On January 1 this year savings and deposits held by banks in that city totaled $491,500,000 as compared with $387,000,000 at the corresponding time last year. The increase is $104,500,000, or 26.7 per cent. It is considered the more remarkable because a large part of the gain came late in the year when so many persons were out of employment.

Pig Iron Production

Pig iron production increased more than five million tons in 1920 as compared with the preceding year, according to the Iron Age. The increase was striking because business depression caused curtailment of furnace activity in the Autumn on the part of independents. The output for last year was 36,414,114 tons, not including charcoal iron, against 31,004,500 in 1919 and 38,-526,147 in 1918.

Cotton Goods More Active

There was more activity in the Fall River cotton goods market last week, sales being estimated at 115,000 pieces. The demand was for spot or nearby deliveries.

Boston Financial Notes

The output of Cobalt mines for 1920 totaled $11,705,088 in value. Its silver mines produced approximately 9,931,143 fine ounces of silver valued at approximately $9,905,088. This represents a decline of about $3,000,000 from the 1919 total.

President J. Parke Channing of the Seneca Copper Corporation and a party of mining engineers are in Michigan to inspect the property.

Copper production last year by Greene-Cananea totaled 42,850,000 pounds, against 41,300,000 for 1919, while its silver output was 1,760,570 ounces, as compared with 1,709,930.

President Knight has informed stockholders that during October production by the Iron Cap Copper Co. was 771,939 pounds of copper, 10,081 ounces of silver and 114 ounces of gold. During November the output was 607,-044 pounds of copper, 7,945 ounces of silver and 75 ounces of gold.

Dividend Declarations

Edison Electric Illuminating Co. of Brockton declared quarterly dividend of $2.50 a share, payable February 1 to holders of record January 15.

Lowell Electric Light Corporation declared quarterly dividend of $2.50 a share, payable February 1 to holders of record January 15.

Du Pont Chemical Co. declared cash dividend of 4 per cent. (20c a share), on common and preferred stocks, payable February 5 to holders of record January 25.

Cuney Sugar Co. declared quarterly dividend of 2 per cent. on common and a semi-annual dividend of 3½ per cent. on preferred, both payable February 1 to holders of record January 15.

LOWER PRICES IN BOSTON

Local Market Influenced by the New York Recessional; Curb Quiet, but Firm

After an irregular opening the Boston Market was influenced by the trend in New York and it was weak at the end of an hour. It was active during the morning, but the price range was rather narrow. Trading was lacking in features. New Haven was a weak rail, but several Boston & Maine issues showed strength. Coppers had a mixed movement and packing issues were inclined toward a lower level. Gray & Davis was the only auto accessory stock to show life during the forenoon, and it receded a little after an unchanged start. Among stocks to advance from one to more than two points were Allouez, United Fruit and Boston & Maine D. Losses of from one to two points were sustained by Mohawk, Oseeola and U. S. Smelting.

Fractional gains were made by Boston & Maine, Copper Range, United Shoe and Bigheart. Issues to recede less than a point were American Telephone, Boston Elevated, Calumet & Arizona, New Cornelia, Carson Hill, National Leather, Swift & Co., International Products and Gray & Davis.

CURB FIRM, BUT QUIET.

The Curb had a very quiet start, but showed strength from the beginning. The good tone was maintained during the morning. A number of issues showed no price change. Boston & Montana and Mutual scrip were issues most in evidence during the forenoon. Strong stocks at the start were Albany Divide, Bagdad, Crystal, Eureka, Merrimac Development, Mutual and Texana. Weak ones were Randolph and Verde Mines.

At the end of an hour Mutual was up 1 cent at 55 cents and Merrimac Development had a cent at 4½ cents. Seven Metals was off 1 cent at 10 cents.

LONDON MARKET BECOMES STRONGER

London, Jan. 10.—The market recovered generally during the first week of the year with gilt-edged stocks leading the rise of practically the whole list. Factors influencing the revival of confidence are not important, and it is doubtful if the public is getting in, in any considerable numbers. Investors are generally waiting to see how the government settles the problem of helping the million unemployed.

The market boost is mainly the result of the cessation of the continuous year end liquidation with the bulls jumping in after a long period of quiescence.

The bullish talk concerns the hopes of a reduction in the bank rate, the possibility of the extension of credit to central Europe, with a resultant revival of foreign trade; hopes of Irish settlement and the virtual certainty that the government is going to drop the 60 per cent. excess profits duty next April, substituting increased inheritance taxes.

The reinvestment of dividends has helped industrials. Iron, steel and textiles led a small general advance. Rubbers enjoyed a notable revival manipulated from the inside because the demand for raw rubber was not expanding.

Improvement in the dollar value of the pound sterling was partially due to the announcement of Lord Chalmers' visit to Washington to arrange a funding of the British indebtedness and also to the falling off of the European demand for American products and lower prices for such goods as were imported.

LEATHER MARKET IS BECOMING FIRMER

The leather market is becoming firmer, calfskin selling in Chicago on Friday last at 19 cents a pound, as compared with a low record price of 14 cents, reached last year. Just before the great war began it was selling at a little under 20 cents. In August, 1919, it sold in Chicago as high as a dollar a pound. The slump was greater than the advance.

It is understood that one large tanner has withdrawn from the market. Another firm has marked up quotations on glazed kid 10 cents a foot. In one or two other cases finished calfskin leather has been advanced about five cents a foot in asking price on new business. There is a better sentiment in regard to cattle hides, with light country hides, which sold at 10 cents a pound a few days ago, now bringing 11 cents, with 12 cents asked.

Movement of Gold

The Imperator is on the way from England to New York with $380,000 in gold consigned to Kuhn, Loeb & Co. Importations by this house on the present movement will amount to $88,520,000 when this shipment arrives. Gold exports from England to this country during the January 5 week amounted to $3,529,450.

BIG COPPER DEMAND SURE IN THE FUTURE

There will be a big demand for copper in the future, no matter how dull the metal market may be for awhile. Immense amounts will be required by electrification projects. In this country, for instance, the Great Northern Railway will electrify its Montana lines from Butte to Great Falls, the survey having been made, while the same change will be made in the state of Washington after the completion of a $1,500,000 power plant at Lake Chelan.

Switzerland is to expend $100,000,-000 in the execution of a hydro-electric project and it is understood in New York that the Swiss government will seek to raise $75,000,000 by selling bonds to Americans. A large part of the money obtained will be spent in this country for copper.

Stock Exchange Seats Higher

The advance in the price of New York Stock Exchange seats reflects increased activity of the securities market. On the two latest sales seats brought $89,000 and $90,000 respectively. The latter figure is an advance of $10,000 over what was obtained at the last previous transaction of the kind.

Boston Wool Shipments

Wool shipments from Boston from January 1 this year to January 6 this year totalled 1,311,300 pounds against 3,272,000 for the corresponding 1920 period, according to the Commercial Bulletin. Receipts amounted to 1,480,-900 pounds against 3,777,500.

Rail Earnings

Colorado Southern gross increased $607,296 in December and $229,183 in the fourth week of that month. Its gain from January 1 last year was $5,599,640.

For November the Pennsylvania road reports increases of $22,870,817 in operating revenue and of $12,132,936 in operating income. At the end of eleven months its operating deficit amounted to $42,628,387, a decrease of $64,275,922.

Canadian National Railways gross increased $1,788,724 in the fourth week of December, while since January 1 the gain was $17,447,165.

The Cuba Railroad reports for October decreases of $75,930 in gross, $631,633 in net after expenses and $624,173 in net after charges. For four months gross increased $288,611, but net after expenses decreased $1,538,128 and net after charges $1,570,395.

Western Maryland's gross increased $628,-128 in December and $125,075 in the fourth week.

Cotton Market Opening

New York, Jan. 10.—An advance of 3 to 15 points at the opening of the cotton market, due to steadier cables, met heavy selling for Wall street account, which with an easier stock market soon caused setbacks of 10 to 15 points. New Orleans and other Southern firms added to the depression after the start, while the ginning figures were less than had been expected. They showed a considerably larger amount turned out for the period in the same time for the previous season. At the end of twenty minutes the market was quieter and about 5 points under Saturday's close. Opening prices were: January, 16.80; March, 15.65; May, 15.60; July, 15.70; August, 15.75; September, 15.90; October, 15.83; December, 15.85.

RETAIL TRADE IS INCREASING

Improvement in Security Prices Is Solely Due to Speculation

By BROADAN WALL.
Registered U. S. Patent Office

New York, Jan. 10.—While there is uncertainty in many directions as to whether there will be further depression in general business, the big development making for optimism is the steady, but persistent nation-wide announcements daily of the resumption of more active operations of many corporations, particularly in the motor industry. More favorable reports are also received from the woolen and silk industries.

Because of the number of plants that are resuming activities and the re-employment of men who were laid off months ago, there has been a distinct change in sentiment for the better, not only on the part of business interests, but the banking fraternity. This betterment in sentiment has found reflection the last week in consecutive days of strength in the stock market and sharp recoveries in security values.

Improvement in security prices is due entirely to speculation, for large brokerage houses say that the public continues to hold aloof, except where the purchases of stock are made for cash and the certificates taken home by the purchasers. The amount of cash buying of securities continues in substantial volume, but it is not as heavy as it was during the week preceding the beginning of the new year, when investors in all parts of the country took many thousands of shares out of Wall street.

Another favorable development has been that the volume of retail trade has shown a fair increase as a result of price cuts and is much better in the aggregate than had been anticipated.

The credit situation is showing signs of improvement and this was given color by the statement of Governor Harding, of the Federal Reserve Board, who expressed a belief that the depression of business is about over.

Railroad shares have been relatively quiet and have not shared in the quick rebound which occurred in the industrial issues.

Wall Street Briefs

Recent odd-lot buying of U. S. Steel common shares has been on the largest scale ever known. The corporation added 5,000 new names to its list of stockholders in the last three months of 1920.

New York brokers report that there is comparatively little demand for money for stock market purposes at 7 per cent. A large sum available for their clients goes unloaned every day.

The directorate of the Du Pont Chemical Co. has been increased from seven to eight members and Clifford McIntyre added to the board.

In 1920 the business of the H. H. Franklin Manufacturing Co. amounted to approximately $28,000,000, against $23,400,000 in 1919.

For the year ended June 30, 1920, the Mexican Eagle Oil Co. reports profit on trading of $28,636,000 (U. S. currency), against $18,424,000 in preceding year. Net profit after depreciation, etc., was $27,329,608, against $14,784,008; balance for dividends $27,022,269, against $13,175,887.

Middle States Oil earnings for 1920 are expected to approximate $9 a share. For the first nine months they were $6.52 a share.

A local financial publication says: "An indication of the large short interest in the market can be gleaned from the condition of a large commission house which finds its stock loaning account to be larger than at any time in the last 12 months. The same house also finds its borrowings to be smaller in volume than at any time in the last two and one-half years."

The Illinois Utilities Commission has authorized the Chicago & Northwestern to issue $10,000,000 7 per cent. equipment trusts.

For November the Chicago Junction Railway reports gross earnings $352,461, an increase of $17,362; net earnings after taxes $4,335, a decrease of $15,968; for the eleven months ended November 30, gross earnings $3,204,703, a decrease of $1,196,713; deficit after taxes $1,305,484, an increase of $1,221,328.

Cotton Ginning Report

Washington, Jan. 10.—The census report shows cotton ginned to January 1 from the crops of 1920 and 1919 respectively: Total running bales (counting round as half bales), 11,559,230 and 10,008,920; round bales included, 202,276 and 109,856; American and Egyptian, 83,964 and 31,628; Sea Island, 1,599 and 6,458.

GALBRAITH AND HARDING CONFER

Legion Head Presents Plea for Wounded; Harding Quits as Senator

Marion, O., Jan. 10.—An earnest plea for the welfare of disabled veterans of the World War was made to Senator Harding today by F. W. Galbraith, commander of the American Legion. Major Galbraith urged that the Bureau of War Risk Insurance, the Public Health Service and the Bureau of Vocational Training be placed under one directing head. This action, he contended, would lessen shifting of responsibility from one bureau to the other and obviate many abuses.

Major Galbraith told Harding there were more than 30,000 disabled service men now in hospitals, which were sadly overcrowded and without proper facilities to care for the constantly increasing number of patients.

William G. Sharp, Democrat, former ambassador to France, outlined to the President-elect, it is understood, his impressions of the reception which Senator Harding's plan for an association of nations would receive from the French people.

When Governor Harry L. Davis took office today he found on his desk Senator Harding's resignation from the United States Senate, to become effective January 13. One of Governor Davis' first official acts will be to appoint Senator-elect Frank B. Willis to fill out Harding's unexpired term.

Former Governor Cox recently offered to appoint Willis on Senator Harding's resignation, but the President-elect did not take advantage of the proposal of his late opponent and delayed his resignation to let the appointment of his successor come from a governor of his own political party.

DR. FLEISCHER TALKS ON UNBELIEVER'S FAITH

Charles Fleischer, speaking at the meeting of The Commons, in Huntington Chambers Hall, on "The Belief of Unbelief," said in part: "Often the faith of the so-called unbeliever is larger than that of the supposed believer. Proverbially, 'orthodoxy is my doxy, and heterodoxy is the other fellows.' The infidel, so-called, may be only the person who refuses to share your belief. What is characterized as scepticism is commonly only the beginning of original experience in the realm of faith. It is necessary to doubt the conventional belief, in order either to establish that belief by your own argument or to work your way to new faith by the path of thoughtful and reverent unbelief."

$11,000 COLLECTED FOR MISSIONS AT OLD SOUTH

More than $11,000 in silver and bills, believed to be the largest collection ever made at a single meeting for foreign missionary work, was contributed by members of the Old South congregation, following the appeal by Dr. George A. Gordon for a world family, in which the blessings of one nation would be shared with others less fortunate.

YES MR. HOOVER I HAVE

AUTO OWNERS TO AID CHILD DRIVE

Hoover Urges Them to Contribute $10 to Help Save Starving Youngsters

Facsimile of sticker for auto windshields showing owner of the auto has donated to the Child Relief Fund.

The quarter of a million owners of automobiles in Massachusetts have been asked by Herbert Hoover to save a like number of lives of starving children in Eastern and Central Europe by contributing $10 each to the European Relief Campaign now being waged actively in this State under the direction of John W. Hallowell. Appeals from Mr. Hoover have been mailed to owners of motor vehicles in every city, town, village and hamlet in the State.

Ten dollars, the cost of a few gallons of gasoline, a little oil, or a fraction of a tire is the amount needed to save a child from starvation. There are 3,500,000 children who are facing such a condition and who will perish, Mr. Hoover says, unless fed by American charity.

STICKERS FOR WINDSHIELDS.

"Would you run over a child if you could avoid it?" is the question asked in the appeal. "Certainly not," would be the invariable reply.

"Would you drive by a helpless, appealing child if you could save its life?" Again, "most assuredly not."

"Will you save a child's life?"

The answer to the last question is enclosed in the appeal, and that answer in the form of bright sticker to be pasted in the windshield is "Yes, Mr. Hoover, I have."

This sticker is the public announcement that the owner of the car has complied with Mr. Hoover's request and has saved a child's life by sending $10 to the headquarters at No. 166 Devonshire street, Boston.

SEES BIG RESPONSE.

"We want Massachusetts Save-a-Child's-Life Auto Club to be 100 per cent. enrolled," said Mr. Hallowell in making the announcement of the organization. "I believe that every automobile in the State will be carrying a Hoover sticker before the end of the week."

Checks should be made payable to the European Children's Fund and sent to James Jackson, treasurer, No. 166 Devonshire street, Boston.

BANDITS HOLD UP GAMBLERS

Quartet Flee in Auto After Raid on Club at Arlington, R. I.

Providence, Jan. 10.—Armed bandits held up a dice game at the Niantic Avenue Club, just over the city line in Arlington, and, after robbing the players of several hundreds of dollars, escaped in an automobile. Neither the police nor the players have any clew to their identity.

According to those who were in the club a big game was in progress and large wagers were being made when four men, masked and armed with automatic revolvers, broke through the door of the building and ordered "Hands up!"

After the robbery the bandits warned the players against any attempt to follow them.

The players departed for home without reporting the robbery to the police. Later in the day, however, the affair was reported to the authorities.

It is said that a big crap game at the club has been the rule every Saturday night for some time. The game has lasted well in o Sunday morning and has always been largely attended. Attempts to get many details of the affair have failed inasmuch as the players have refused to discuss it.

The rooms used by the club are situated on the second floor of a two-story building. The "crap" table is in a front room and poker is played in two side rooms. Luncheon is served in the kitchen.

NEW TRIPLE ENTENTE TO GROOM GIANTS FOR PENNANT RACE

Indoor Sports — By TAD — Dog in Danger

GREATEST COACHERS IN GAME

Jennings and Jesse Burkett to Assist McGraw in Baseball Work

New York, Jan. 10.—A new triple entente has arisen in the field of baseball. John (Muggsy) McGraw has gathered unto his Giant banner one Hughey Jennings of Tiger fame and one Jesse Burkett.

These two men who have been in the limelight of the national game almost as long as Muggsy himself have been secured to help develop a pennant-snatching Giant outfit this season.

In starting out at the helm of the Giants this year McGraw will commence his twentieth year as manager of the New York National League Club.

Long ago in his active days on the diamond the little Napoleon of baseball was some slugging infielder. As third baseman for the Baltimore Orioles he never let his batting average slump under .300. Jennings was the teammate of Muggsy at this time and was also a heavy swatter.

These two veterans with Jesse Burkett should get results with the Giant's baseball talent for the coming season.

McGraw will call his men together at San Antonio on March 1 where his new associates will have their first chance to try a hand at developing the New York material.

SOMERVILLE COMPANY TO PLAY NONPAREILS

The A Company, 101st Regiment, basketball team of Somerville will be opposed by the Nonpareil Club at the Somerville Armory next Tuesday evening and a fast game is expected. The A Company team is rapidly forging to the front as one of the leading light-weight teams of the State, having beaten such strong teams as Fort Andrews, Battery F, H Company of Newton and others.

In the preliminary game the A Company team will play the Kaler, Carney, Liffler & Company team of the Insurance League, in a return game. The second team has yet to suffer defeat.

Games are desired for both first and second teams, with any military or naval team in the State. Direct all communications to Sergeant George L. Anderson, Somerville Armory.

BOXERS FORBIDDEN TO USE NATIONAL COLORS

At the request of the Massachusetts branch of the American Legion, the State boxing commission has decreed that hereafter no boxer will be permitted to enter a ring wearing the American flag. The commission has notified all the clubs of its stand and also has requested that boxers refrain from making religious signs in the ring.

Honor Babe Ruth, Says Cardinal Gibbons

Baltimore, Jan. 10.—The Ruth School for dependent and wayward boys was proposed by Cardinal Gibbons, when he heard that the citizens of Baltimore were prepared to erect a cathedral in honor of himself. The St. Mark's Industrial School of this city, which the home run king once attended, was recently destroyed by fire and the Cardinal urges a new building for the boys be erected and named after the school's most famous pupil.

SPORT EDITORIAL

How Very, Very English!

What bally rot is this, the English claim that Pete Herman is still the bantamweight champion of the world, and that if Jimmy Wilde defeats him Jimmy will win the title?

Herman was whipped, and jolly well whipped, by Joe Lynch at Madison Square Garden just before Herman sailed for Europe, in a battle that went fifteen rounds to a decision.

Lynch is now the bantam champion. He is the same Lynch who gave Jimmy Wilde a good beating over in London, only to get the worst of a decision from an English referee.

The English claim, according to the Associated Press, that Herman could have lost his title to Lynch only by a knockout, or at least after a twenty-round contest.

It is useless, of course, but we might suggest to the English that had the Herman-Lynch matter gone twenty rounds Herman would have been just five rounds less the champion than he is today.

No one over here ever denied that Freddy Welsh was the lightweight champion after he got an English referee's decision over Willie Ritchie, and Ritchie was certainly not knocked out in that fight.

The claim with reference to Herman sounds to us as if it may be publicity matter promulgated for the purpose of building up the Herman-Wilde affair. It is not particularly clever, and if anybody in England takes any stock in it they are even more stupid than we have suspected.

The only title involved between Herman and Wilde is Wilde's title of flyweight champion of the world, generously recognized over here, and held by a great little fighter. And even if Herman wins over Wilde, which isn't likely, he cannot take Wilde's flyweight title, because he isn't a flyweight.

Stories of Famous Fights

The Knockout of Pedlar Palmer

This is the fifth of a series of "Finishes of Old-Time Fights," written by authorities on pugilism who were famous in their day. Others will follow.

Today we cover two fights that Terry McGovern won—the defeat of Pedlar Palmer, at Tuckahoe, on September 12, 1899, in 2 minutes 32 seconds; and the downfall of that great negro, George Dixon, in New York, on January 9, 1900, in eight rounds.

The best description of these fights was written by the late Paul Armstrong, in the program of the McGovern benefit, held at Madison Square Garden, fourteen years ago. It is printed below.

By Paul Armstrong.

What memories come back with the name! What wild scenes of battle and blood drift before the eye! What shrieking applause and hoarse tumult of approval re-echo in the ear! What thrills the blood vaguely feels, as the shadows of the drifting years halt at the name of McGovern!

"LITTLE TERRY," in the real days when but few knew of his greatness; when he fought for the supremacy of his ward, the favor of a girl, or just the fun of the fight.

"TERRY McGOVERN," when he was fighting for the money to make an Irish mother the envy of the neighborhood, and he fought as the cave man battled in those days. Science he knew not of, rules he cared not for; the sudden annihilation of his opponent was his one idea.

"TERRIBLE TERRY," when he crossed the bridge with a Brooklyn majority and the bantamweight championship tacked to his belt, a man had steadied him, a manager and a pal. He had found himself, conquered himself and had the cave man in him educated.

Still lightning fast as thought, as merciless as belated vengeance, as resistless as the mangling avalanche and tireless as hope, he came, eager for the fight.

Memory gives us but a tangle of scenes, for memory is a crowded tenement. But here and there stands forth in the flood light of greatness a scene, a flash! A cocky Englishman, under a Summer sun, feinted gracefully once or twice, smiled derisively, led, and dropped as if dead. A championship. The recollection always brings with it a half smile.

But there are remembrances of fighters with the cleverness of diplomats, the cunning of animals and the dash of a breaking wave; of ruffians, foul as hell, tough as leather, with jaws of stone; of freaks with bodies of middleweights and legs of a child that got them inside the weight. Memory shows us but one picture of them all: A blinding flash, a rush of blood, of sudden strife, tumult, and they had passed. And then another shadow comes. Dixon, older, wiser and the stoic of his race and class and time. The veteran of a hundred fights, the acknowledged champion of a teeming world.

A clubhouse, packed to suffocation, thick with smoke and vibrating with expectancy. Two wondrous gladiators under a glaring light; two fighters of utter courage, utter strength and utter cunning. A jangling bell in a babbling confusion brings order, then the hush of death.

Two things of utter fitness and perfect grace slip from the corners. They advance, flit hither and thither, circle, then are tangled in each other's arms. The hush about them is broken. Amid a roaring tumult they seek each other's lives. At intervals an irritating and unwelcome bell is heard dimly in the din, demanding a breathing space.

As if but yesterday memory holds that one scene unfaded and red as blood. They stand flat-footed, face to face. Then thousand years of civilization have finally been worn away and two primitive animals stand fighting to the death. About them, which they hear no more than the long dead, the air is rent with shrieks of hysteria, growling throat notes of rage, yells of victory and cries of joy, and in this was born McGovern, the peerless—the greatest of them all.

GLAD HAND BOYS WILL BE BUSY

Harvard to Welcome Visiting Athletes in Regular Official Fashion

There is going to be no cold shoulders for visiting athletes at Harvard this year. A committee which might aptly be termed "The glad hand boys" has just been appointed by the Student Council to see that invading teams get every comfort of home except victory. This body of which Charles W. ("Sonny") Baker of New York, candidate for the hockey team, is chairman, is composed of three men, the rmaining two being Joseph Larocque of Bernardsville, N. J., and Bradley Nash of Brookline.

A committee on freshman activities appointed by the council is composed of Ned Bigelow of Boston, the hockey captain; Lewis McCagg of New York, who heads the crew; Charles Buell of Hartford, Ct., the varsity quarterback; John Flint of Boston, candidate for goal tender on the hockey team, and T. Redmond Thayer of Brooklyn, N. Y., baseball manager, who is acting as chairman. Robert M. Sedgwick of New York, the varsity tackle, has been appointed chairman of the committee on scholarship, whose duty it is to keep undergraduates off probation.

COFFEY TO FIGHT FOR LOST CITY JOB

Thomas F. Coffey, discharged elevator starter at City Hall, through his attorney, Herbert A. Kenny, has petitioned the East Boston District Court for his reinstatement. The court action will be taken as an appeal from the recent decision of Frederick J. Kneeland, superintendent of public buildings, that Coffey could not be reinstated to his $1,300 a year position on the city payroll.

MICHIGAN TO HAVE FOOTBALL STADIUM

Ann Arbor, Mich., Jan. 10.—Plans for the erection of a new concrete north stand and a new west stand to complete the "U" stadium on Ferry Field have been approved by the board in control of athletics at the University of Michigan and work on this project will begin in the Spring if the bids are inside the $400,000 mark.

SHEVLIN HAS SEVENTY PUPILS AT DARTMOUTH

Hanover, N. H., Jan. 10.—"Professor" Edward Shevlin, instructor in boxing, has at present seventy students attending his classes in the manly art of self-defence. Instruction is given every afternoon. A boxing tournament is to be held later in the season.

HEAPHY FAVORED FOR B. C. GRID CAPTAINCY

Jack Heaphy, centre on the Boston College football team for the past two years, is expected to be the next captain of the Maroon and Old Gold eleven. The election will be held at the alumni banquet day after tomorrow.

BOXERS TO HAVE FULL WEEK

Carlyle A. C. Starts Ball Rolling With McFarland-Loughlin Bout Tonight

By RINGSIDE.

The Carlyle A. C. introduces one of the busiest weeks in history of Boston boxing by stacking Tommy McFarland, the best welterweight developed hereabouts since Eddie Shevlin cut into the picture, up against K. O. Loughlin, a regular championship contender, tonight at the Grand Opera House.

This muss should be speckled with action from start to finish. The local battler is willing, aggressive and a good puncher. He has the natural fighting ability. The bird he meets has the same valuable qualification, as well as three or four years' experience against the best men in the class. Like McFarland, he uses the rushing, tearing style which wears an opponent down.

The prelims to this affair are interesting, likewise, as they produce a lot of the ambitious young local talent. The semi-final will give Nixie Searles a chance to prove his class. He boxes Jack Savage, and if he can knock that tough individual off, the world will be ready to believe that Nixie has something.

Johnny Gill to Battle Shevlin at Faneuil

Johnny Summers of New York backed out of his match with Eddie Shevlin, which was one of the three fefatures arranged by the Faneuil for tomorrow evening at Mechanics. Matchmaker Mahoney didn't waste any time signing up Johnny Gill, who is at least as dangerous an enemy for the Roxbury warrior. Gill has beaten Bryan Downey, and a lot of other good boys, and has two very creditable bouts with Jack Britton on his record.

He looked so good against the champion that the latter's manager took him in tow, holding him in reserve for such time as Jack might quit the game. Gill has been training, so will be ready for Shevlin. As a result of his quitting, Summers is in wrong with the New York boxing commission, and is likely to have a lot of trouble getting future bouts.

Frush and Leary on Commonwealth Card

Danny Frush of Baltimore, who beat Al Shubert recently at the Commonwealth, has been signed up by that club for the main mingle the coming Saturday. He will box Artie O'Leary of New York, who ranks just about as highly among the litties as Danny, which is very high. They have met twice previously, once in a no-decision bout and once in scrap which Frush won. O'Leary was awarded the newspaper verdict in the initial encounter.

The Commercial Club has decided to use the Commonwealth quarters at Scenic Temple from now out and picked Thursday as show night. The first meeting in the new home will be on January 20.

Tillo and Silva are likely to be rematched within a few days following their close battle at the C. A. C. last week. Two local clubs are reported after the pair, while several offers have been received from out-of-town clubs.

DARTMOUTH TO PLAY GEORGIA UNIVERSITY

Hanover, N. H., Jan. 10.—Dartmouth is to wind up its 1921 football season November 26 with a game in which University of Georgia will figure as opponent instead of Syracuse. The contest will take place on the Polo Grounds, New York. The question of the appointment of a coach to succeed "Cutie" Spears was taken up by the athletic council but no decision was reached.

Robins to Play Here

The Robins Drydock soccer team will play the Fore River team at Quincy in a fifth round game some time before February 27.

Mike O'Dowd Wins Bout Only to Lose Decision Later

New York, Jan. 10.—Mike O'Dowd, former middleweight champion of the boxing world, waged an unannounced one-round bout with a Brooklyn policeman, and although scoring a temporary victory over the officer, Mike lost the decision at court.

O'Dowd was held in bail of $1,000 for a hearing tomorrow. According to his explanation to the court Mike was on his way home with two friends and all were singing and making undue noise when Michael Reilly, a policeman, ordered them to stop the racket. Mike started fighting instead of complying. He grabbed the policeman's night stick and began punching the latter's face when O'Dowd's two friends intervened.

At the station the patrolman shook hands with Mike before his friends raised the bail. They parted on good terms.

$500 Trophy in Honor of Coach Winsor

By CHARLES E. PARKER.

Local ice hockey was given a tremendous boost today when it was announced that a $500 cup, to be known as "The Winsor Trophy" had been offered by unnamed hockey enthusiasts as a perpetual prize for an annual series of ice battles between the two leading ice teams of this city.

The cup has been named in honor of Alfred ("Ralph") Winsor, the most prominent hockey coach in the United States, and sponsor of the Winsor system of hockey, which has been so successfully employed by Harvard and B. A. A. teams, in vanquishing the aggregations of Canada and other sections of the American continent.

George V. Brown, manager of the Arena; Tom Kanaly, secretary of the B. A. A., and Ralph Winsor have been named as custodians of the trophy, and the B. A. A. and Shoe Trades teams are the organizations which will fight for its possession for the current year. Seven games, exclusive of those played by the two teams in the regular league series, will be arranged for the cup competition, and that local hockey interest will be at fever heat once the series gets underway is certain.

Thrilling Contests Scheduled This Week

Hockey hits into full swing this week.

Three games are on the schedule—Harvard's brilliant varsity seven meeting the B. A. A. on Wednesday night; Boston College clashing with Tech on Thursday evening, and the opening league game between the B. A. A. and the St. Nicks of New York occurring on Saturday night—and from the interest already demonstrated in this speediest of all Winter sports, capacity houses seem assured on each occasion.

Last Saturday night's crowd of 7,000 or more gave first intimation of how popular the game has become with local sport followers and that such favor will continue and increase as the season progresses and the stakes in each contest become dearer is only natural.

This week's hockey events possess many attractive features. The Harvard-B. A. A. contest marks the opening test of college hockey against club hockey. Harvard's team unquestionably is one of the most brilliant ever to represent the Crimson, while the B. A. A. looms as the speediest and most skilful ever to wear the Unicorn uniform. The greater experience of the B. A. A. men incline many to favor that array, but Harvard's longer experience on the ice and perfected team play wins favor for the Crimson from many quarters. In any event the contest should prove a thriller from start to finish.

Boston College-Tech Game Promising

Keen rivalry exists between Thursday night's opponents at the Arena-Boston College and M. I. T. Last year at the old Pavilion the clash between the two institutions developed into a free for all slashing match. This year, however, the rival coaches—Fred Rocque of B. C. and Chippie Gaw of Tech—are insisting that their charges play real hockey, and if such proves the case the game will be far from unattractive. Both institutions will be represented by large cheering sections.

Each team has played one game, with Tech losing to King's College after Tech had obtained a 3 to 1 lead, and Boston College winning from Bates by the score of 5 to 0. Captain Hughes is B. C.'s brightest performer, and much is expected from him in Thursday's game. Tech's scoring ace is Dan McNeil, who staged several brilliant flashes against King's. Dan, however, has shown a proneness to loaf off side, which tendency should be corrected by the Tech coach before he engages in the B. C. contest.

Opening League Game a Feature Contest

The B. A. A. is expected to open its league season with a victory on Saturday night. On the Unicorn squad are two complete teams of real ability, with several other players of considerable promise, and from this group should be formed a truly wonderful aggregation.

The St. Nicks, who oppose the B. A. A., have many men of ability, but in several instances such men appear on the down grade in so far as active athletics are concerned. Already the Gotham outfit has sustained two defeats at the hands of the Quaker City team on the Philadelphia rink, and as the Quaker City team is far from the strongest combination in the country such defeats do not disclose the St. Nicks as an aggregation capable of forcing the strong B. A. A. outfit.

Freddy Huntington of Harvard varsity and B. A. A. fame is now a member of the St. Nicholas team, and undoubtedly will prepare that organization to meet the B. A. A. style of play. Von Bernuth, another veteran player and the man who scored the only goal made by the St. Nicks against Quaker City, is well known to Boston hockey fans, although he never played on a local team.

Uniforms Issued to Shoe Trades Team

Raymie Skilton's Shoe Trades team is to be brilliant in other respects than stick-handling and skate-manipulating. The uniforms issued the most promising members of the array at their initial practice in the Arena are the most gorgeous ever to be worn by a local hockey organization. Royal blue and gold form the color scheme, and those colors are mixed in such manner that opposing teams should have no doubt as to the identity of Shoe Trades players, even in the hottest heat of battle.

The practice session at which the uniforms were issued disclosed the Shoe Trades Club as possessing a remarkably able set of candidates.

DRAAK MATCH IS REAL TEST

Pendleton to Seek Bouts With Big Fellows if He Wins Thursday Night

Nat Pendleton, the Olympic star wrestler, is being coached at Bothner's gymnasium for his match with Tommy Draak, several of his mentors being men who have met Draak on the mat in the past and who know his strong and weak points.

Pendleton is tickled over the chance to get the Hollander, for he writes to Promoter Tuohey that if he wins over Draak it will give him a line on what his chances may be against the big stars of the game, all of whom have faced Draak in the past.

"Depend on me to be at my best Thursday night at the Grand Opera House," writes Pendleton, "for I have been wrestling right along, winning decisively against all sizes and shapes and men of so many different styles that the experience has been of the greatest value to me. It will be handy when I tackle the Hollander."

DR. LAMBETH WILL URGE FOOTBALL RULES CHANGE

Charlottesville, Va., Jan. 10.—Dr. William A. Lambeth, guiding spirit of the athletics of the University of Virginia, will make another effort to have the present football rules changed in regard to safeties and touchbacks, when the National Rules Committee, of which he is a member, meets next month in New York City.

It is Dr. Lambeth's contention that spectators at a football game are never able to tell which has been scored. He would make a distinction by bringing the ball out to the forty-yard line following the scoring of a safety.

FRAZEE MEETS PRATT, BUT NOTHING IS DONE

Detroit, Mich., Jan. 10.—Henry H. Frazee, president of the Red Sox, came, saw and talked with Derrill Pratt for more than an hour, but failed to come to any agreement with the ex-Yankee infielder. The Boston magnate said he might have a few remarks to make in a couple of days but that at present he did not care to discuss the relations of the Red Sox and Pratt. The player returned to Ann Arbor without having signed any contract.

Basketball Games Wanted

The Park A. C. has a newly organized basketball team and desires games with fast semi-pro teams K. of C., Legion teams, etc., away from home.

Teams offering a suitable guarantee write to J. J. Dugan, No. 595 Hancock street, Wollaston.

Roxbury Council, K. of C., are represented by a fast team and are anxious to meet the strongest fives in the State. Last year this team had a record of winning 32 out of 34 games and finishing second to the crack West End Council team in the K. of C. League.

Games are desired with Plymouth, Gloucester, Institute A. A., Fitton's, Peabody, Pere Marquette K. of C., and South Boston K. of C. Address communication to Joseph Lynch, No. 4 Delle avenue, Roxbury, or call Bellevue 339 between 12 and 2 p. m.

"IT didn't look much like it!" retorted Jerry. But he turned to his daughter. "How about it, Jennie?"

Jennie hesitated. Slim watched her breathlessly. At that instant Jennie felt so much fear on her own behalf as fear of what her father might do and its consequences to him.

"It's just as Slim said," she managed to say. "We—we forgot ourselves and began scrapping—just as though we were kids again."

"Are you sure about that?" Jerry demanded of Jennie in tense gruffness. "You know I've sometimes thought he's the guy that's been blackmailing you. If he is, say the word and he'll never trouble you no more. Uncle George will first help you make your get-away back uptown where you belong. After you're gone, I'll twist Slim's neck and then let him slide down the stairway. Nobody can ever prove but what it was an accidental fall, down the stairway that broke his neck. How about it, Jennie? I know he's a crook, and has always been a crook—but is he the man?"

Again Slim held his breath. And again Jennie did not answer for an instant. She saw relief, instant relief, from all the danger to herself that Slim personified.

But again she thought chiefly of her father. She remembered how the charge of a double murder of which he was innocent had darkened all his life. With such a character as he already bore, and the charge of another murder which might be made against him, why—

"No, Slim is not the man," she interrupted her swift thoughts to say.

"You're sure about that?"

"I'm sure, dad."

"Well, I'm not so sure," grunted Jerry. He turned again on Slim. "What did you come up here for?"

Slim's courage was now well in hand. "That's simple, Jerry. I came because Jennie asked me to. She said she wanted to see you again and the old place. She asked me because she wanted company and I was the only one of her present friends who knew who she really was. That's all there is to it."

"Is that so, Jennie?" Black Jerry demanded.

"Yes, dad," she answered.

"I'm not so sure about that either," he returned. "I guess you remember how many times I've ordered you not to take the risk of coming around me."

It made her sick, this lying to save Slim Jackson. But then she was really lying to save her father. "I remember, dad—but I—I—just wanted to see you."

There was something Slim had been wondering about since Black Jerry's unexpected entrance—that message of his which should have kept Jerry uptown. "But there's one thing I don't just get, Jerry. Jennie said you'd be sure to be in at this time, but we've been hanging around here half an hour. Where the devil have you been?—that's what Jennie doesn't understand."

"Been downstairs in my office with Uncle George here all the time till that bell rang—except for a few minutes."

Slim tried to make his query seem casual. "Except for a few minutes?"

Jerry addressed Uncle George, his tone meditative. "That message I got from you saying you wanted me to meet you uptown still seems mighty strange—when you never sent it, and yet when you actually did not want to see me."

Some Coincidence

"It certainly is some coincidence," agreed Uncle George.

"Those few minutes you were out must have been when we came in," remarked Slim. "When was that?"

"About an hour ago," replied Jerry. "I had just started uptown to meet Uncle George like the message said, when I bumped into Uncle George.

"Just got an idea, Jerry," said Uncle George. "That message may have been sent by some friend of Harry Edwards who didn't dare show his hand."

"Harry Edwards!" Jennie exclaimed.

"Yes, Harry Edwards is what we've been talking about," the old man answered slowly. "And we'd decided that I was to manage to meet you somewhere and put the situation up to you. But since you're here, I guess we might as well talk the situation over now."

"What situation, Uncle George?" she breathed.

"Wait a minute," interposed Black Jerry. "Want to talk with Slim around?"

"I guess there can't be much Slim doesn't know already or won't know soon," replied the old man with a gaze of disfavor on Slim. "But it helps my eyes when I don't have to look on him, and the breathing seems easier. Suppose you just shove him into one of the bedrooms—it doesn't matter much if he does hear; he may be handy to take Jennie home when we're through."

Black Jerry gripped Slim's arm and started him toward a door. "Come along!"

"Needn't use force, Jerry," Slim protested pleasantly. "Glad to be your guest as long as you like." Drawing out a thin cigarette case of filigreed silver, he passed into what had been Jennie's room in the years gone by. Jerry closed the door, locked it, and pocketed the key.

"We'd better all have a chair," suggested Uncle George. "There's quite a bit to say."

They all sat down, and Jennie waited tensely. There was a moment or two of silence, the two men regarding Jennie steadily.

Uncle George broke the silence. "It sure is one hell of a proposition," he said in a slow, grave voice.

'But you haven't told me yet what the proposition is!" cried Jennie.

"Years ago," Uncle George went on as if she had not spoken, "Jerry and I tried to manage your life for you. You were only a kid then, so our butting in was all right. But you're a grown woman now, and we feel you've got to decide the business for yourself. It's about Harry Edwards I'm talking. You know how things stand with him?"

"Only that he expects to get off when his case comes to trial."

"Well, it's not going to turn out like that," Uncle George announced with quiet solemnity.

"No!" she cried, half starting from her chair. "Why not?"

"For several reasons. We'll come to them. But first, you and I know he didn't kill Murdock—and we know he went to the Tombs and let some evidence be piled up against him in order to shield another man. We know that, too, don't we?"

"Yes."

"And I guess we know who Harry went to jail to protect—and I guess we have a guess as to who really killed Larry Murdock."

"Sam Conway!"

"Exactly. Sam Conway. I haven't a doubt that Sam Conway himself shot Murdock. I don't know whether Conway was in earnest, and honestly thought he could really do it, when he promised to get Harry off if Harry would draw attention away from Conway by standing for the Murdock murder. As I say, I don't know what was in Conway's mind then. But I know what's in his mind now. A lot of things have happened since last Summer. For one thing, the death of Murdock has made Conway a much bigger political figure in this town, and a lot of things go exactly the way Conway wants them to go. In the second place, that Murdock affair has taken such a twist that there has got to be a conviction. The way things stand now, Conway couldn't help Harry even if he wanted to—not unless he was willing to do more than Sam Conway will ever be willing to do. In short, it's got to be either Conway or Harry—and it's not going to be Conway."

The Thing Called Charm

And all these years Beauty and Wealth, and Worldly-Wise, and Jazz, and Curls, and Brains even then never understand why the roses fall into the outheld skirts of plain little Charm!

A wise youth said to me of Charm one day: "All the girls are jealous of her—they think she must have a magic pebble in her mouth or a charm around her neck. The wise ones know it is "CHARM." But even the wisest have never stopped to find out that charm is the disposition in that little person. She has plain TACT. The Adventures of Ann

By Hal Coffman

CHAPTER LXII.

THE woman that Ann had assisted home from the subway was very appreciative and insisted that Ann stay for dinner with her. Ann, however, felt very ill at ease in this strange house and wanted to go. Especially as she was certain she heard Gomez's voice in the next room in animated conversation with other men. The woman rang for her maid, and said something to her in Spanish. The maid uppeared again with a tray upon which were two glasses of a mysterious drink. The woman assured Ann that it was nothing harmful and would brace her up. From where Ann was sitting she could now hear the men's voices in the next room quite plainly. She also could hear the name of Montgomery & Company mentioned now and then.

Ann gathered from the conversation that they were plotting to overthrow a South American government, and as she knew Montgomery & Company supplied that government with nearly everything they used she was naturally very interested.

The woman excused herself, saying she would be back in just a moment and then they would have dinner. As soon as she left the room Ann put her ear to the door where she could better hear what was being said inside. She was now certain Gomez was in there, and she also realized if he saw her something terrible might happen. The woman presently returned and Ann hastily pretended to be admiring a beautiful vase on a mantle near the door at which she had been listening.

This door suddenly opened and a black-bearded man came into the room. At seeing Ann he was greatly startled and spoke excitedly to the woman, who was evidently his wife, and asked her in Spanish how long Ann had been there. The woman explained about the affair in the subway, and told him she had invited Ann to stay to dinner. Here Ann interrupted, and thanking her for the invitation, said she really must be going.

The man scowled and looked at her questioningly as if wondering how much she had heard. Ann smiled serenely at him, however, and started toward the front door. The man jumped in front of her, saying, "One moment, Miss, I fear you have just heard a little too much for our safety, so you will remain here for the present."

Beware of the Handkerchief

By Brice Belden, M. D.

THE danger of the pocket handkerchief as a source of infection has been little recognized even at times when such sources are being searched for most frantically. During the influenza epidemic people were warned about every conceivable germ carrier—except the pocket handkerchief. They were given directions for avoiding trouble, and some of the most popular of precautions were absolutely useless, or, what is more, rather harmful. The deadly pocket handkerchief was not mentioned in the list of things to beware of or offset.

Nasal douches and face masks such as were used during the epidemic were useless to anyone who had exposed himself to the menace of the pockethandkerchief. When it is realized that the handkerchief of an influenza patient is a perfect incubator for the germs of the disease, it will be seen that these favorite precautions are rather foolish.

The face mask interfered with free breathing and made the air which did enter unhealthily warm and damp. Gargling also was a small precaution against the greater danger of the infected handkerchief, besides being a destroyer of the natural secretions which might have helped to offset the handkerchief menace.

Germs feed and multiply in the moist handkerchief, and if the person which owns the incubator has already become infected the danger is, of course, the more terrible to others, and the owner may reinfect himself through it. If this handkerchief is kept in a warm pocket the germs will find themselves in a most comfortable and encouraging environment and the result will be a certiable death-trap, ready to be put into the laundry to disseminat its contents freely among the clothes of others. Thorough boiling in the laundry process would effect sterilization.

The dry handkerchief is dangerous even before the laundry stage, as with the slightest flourish or disturbance its contents will be scattered as an infectious dust into the air. One's handkerchief shou.d never be applied to a child's face, as the nasal secretions are not germ-free even when we are well.

One practical method of preventing infection through this source lies in the sterilization of all handkerchiefs by soaking them in disinfectants before they are washed. Another is the use of paper handkerchiefs which can be burned immediately after use.

Expert's Advice.

A man who had been out of the country for some time went to a restaurant which had advanced its prices considerably. A tip placed him on good terms with the waiter, and he then asked, referring to the menu, "What do you advise?" "Another restaurant," replied the waiter promptly.

The Second Generation

A SPIRITED STORY OF UP-TO-DATE AMERICA

By Virginia Terhune Van de Water

Author of Nation-wide Reputation and Writer of Popular Novels and Short Stories.

CHAPTER XXXVIII.

Copyright, 1920, Star Company.

"GOOD evening!" Mortimer Lawrence took the hand that Mary held out to him. "Good evening, Sheldon," with a nod to her companion.

"I—I—did not know—I mean—I thought you were not to be here," Mary stammered. "I understood Irene to say that you would not get up here this season."

She was annoyed with herself for the sudden throb of joy that her heart gave as she looked at this man. For only a moment ago she had been vowing that she would never give his sister a chance——

Sheldon smiled unpleasantly. "You and I have a way of appearing when Miss Throckmorton acts as if our appearance were a surprise to her—haven't we," he said, a sneer in his voice. "You may recall that I was placed in the same unenviable position as you are now last Spring when you escorted this young lady home from dinner at the Plaza one Sunday night. She then told me that she had not expected me. Now it is your turn."

Mary flushed hotly. "In both cases my statement was true," she said stiffly.

But Sheldon was not to be perturbed.

"I am not doubting that you think so," with a mock obeisance. "What you say goes always. Which reminds me that you said just now you wished me to take a message to your mother. I forgot it in the surprise of seeing Lawrence. I will deliver it immediately."

Before Mary could collect her scattered wits he had left her with Mortimer and was threading his way across the crowed room toward the corner where wearied parents were gathered watching their daughters from afar.

"I told him I wanted to go home," Mary explained to her companion.

"But please don't go until you and I have had a chance for a turn on the veranda," Mortimer pleaded.

A Tete a Tete

Without protest the girl laid her hand on the arm he proffered her, and a moment later they were outside in the cool of the night.

"Let us see if the other end of the promenade is less crowded," Lawrence murmured. "Down there it is almost always forsaken."

Silently Mary followed where he led.

Lewis Sheldon did not have eyes in the back of his head, but he was keen enough to cast a swift glance behind him—a glance that took in the fact that Mary Throckmorton and her escort had left the hall. There was but one place they could go. This was the long veranda. And it was not likely they would stay where the crowd was.

Quickly he turned aside and sought the place where he had last seen Irene Lawrence. She was there still. He addressed her hurriedly.

"I have a pleasant surprise for you," so abruptly that her escort, a bored-looking young man, stared at him. "Your brother has just come. You will find him, I think, at that end of the veranda," indicating a door at the rear of the dance room. "He is with Miss Throckmorton, by the way. I wanted to be the bearer of the pleasant news to you."

"Thank you!" Irene exclaimed, and he could not be sure if there were sarcasm or genuine gratitude in the words. "Mr. Haight," turning to her companion, "you will go out there with me, won't you?"

"Certainly," Reginald Haight acquiesced.

"I will join you in a few moments with Mrs. Throckmorton, as I am to escort her and her daughter back to their hotel," Sheldon remarked.

"Already?" Irene raised her brows. "Surely you are not taking away the most popular girl of the evening already, are you?"

Now there was no mistaking the sarcasm in her tone. But Sheldon would not spoil his own game by seeming to notice it.

"Yes, I am, for Mary is tired, and she ought to go home," he said lightly.

Then before Irene could recover from her shock at his easy use of her former friend's first name he was gone in search of Mrs. Throckmorton.

Rather Vindictive

"Evidently intent upon finding his future mother-in-law," the girl remarked tartly. "I fancy that the Throckmortons have landed him at last."

"It certainly looks that way," her companion agreed. "Shall I take you to find your brother?"

"Yes, please. Mary Throckmorton seems to have corralled Mortimer before he had a chance even to speak to any member of his family. My! I can just fancy how indignant mother will be!" she added, with a little giggle.

She stopped long enough to speak to her parent as she passed her.

"Mother—Mortimer is on the veranda, and I am just on my way out to him. Do you care to come, too?"

Mrs. Lawrence's face turned a dark red.

"On the veranda!" she repeated. "Why—how does it happen he did not come to me as soon as he arrived? I did not even know he was expected here."

"He was not—by us," the girl said, coldly. "And as to his reason for not coming to you first of all—perhaps he is not to blame—for he was intercepted before he had the chance. Mary Throckmorton, I understand, bore his off bodily."

She did not smile at the alacrity with which her mother sprang to her feet and followed toward the rear door leading out upon the long veranda.

Irene Lawrence's self-love dwarfed her sense of humor.

Renovating the Home

By Loretta C. Lynch,

An Acknowledged Authority on All Matters Pertaining to Household Management.

EVERY housewife feels the need from time to time of some definite information as to how to renovate the various things that go toward making up the household.

A letter has come to me from a woman who has to clean some stains from a new French Wilton rug. It seems that her three-year-old baby had a nose bleed and the blood unfortunately fell upon the rug. If the rug were washable her problem would be comparatively easy. For to remove such a stain from any washable article, soak it first in cold water; then soak it in warm (not hot) water, to which a little ammonia has been added. If these methods are not effective, immerse the article in well-diluted Javelle water for a few moments and rinse thoroughly. Then wash with soap and water.

But in the case of a rug which cannot be washed, make a paste of starch mixed with water. Spread the paste over the blood stain. When thoroughly dry, brush off. If all the stain has not disappeared, brush the spot carefully with chloroform after having put absorbent paper underneath.

Paint, tar or varnish succumbs to chloroform after all else has failed.

A number of women ask me how to remove iodine stains. If the stain is on something, such as a dresser scarf, that may be immersed in water, soak at first in cold water for a few moments and then soak in dilute hyposulphite of soda. If the stain is on something that cannot be treated with water apply chloroform.

Sometimes a medicine stain worries the good housekeeper. This can readily be removed by alcohol.

One woman writes of a careless maid who, in attempting to apply paraffin to the tops of jelly glasses in the dining room, spilled it on the carpet. What shall she do?

First, scrape off the excess. Then warm a little alcohol over hot water and apply it. Gum of most any kind may be removed by soaking in gasoline.

Another woman tells me that there are some unsightly yellow stains from vaseline on one of her baby's best pillow-slips. Vaseline stains should be soaked in kerosene before washing.

While ordinary ink will usually succumb to twenty-four hours' soaking in sour milk, if it happens that the regulation fountain pen ink gets upon your best tablecloth, the milk treatment is but a waste of time. One of several treatments may be resorted to in an effort to remove fountain-pen ink. First, use dilute citric or phosphoric acid, followed by a bath of dilute ammona. If this is not successful, try it once again. If still unsuccessful, one of the following may be tried. Dilute hydrochloric or oxalic acid followed by ammonia, or equal parts of peroxide of hydrogen and ammonia, and, lastly, Javelle water.

"THEN it isn't his change of religious opinions they would care about?" said Eleanor.

"Oh, don't say that Eldon Parr won't try to throw him out if he questions the faith as delivered by the saints."

"Phil, what a way of putting it!"

"Any indication of independence, any approach to truth would be regarded as dangerous," Phil continued. "And of course Gordon Atterbury and others we could mention, who think they believe in the unchipped egg theory, will be outraged. But it's deeper than that. Eldon Parr will give orders that Hodder's to go."

"Give orders?"

"Certainly. That vestry, so far as Mr. Parr is concerned, is a mere dummy board of directors. He's made Langmaid, and Plimpton, and even Everett Constable, who's the son of an honorable gentleman, and ought to know better. And he can ruin them by snapping his fingers. He can even make the financial world too hot for Ferguson. I'll say for Gordon Atterbury, that Mr. Parr can't control him, but he's got a majority without him, and Gordon won't vote for a heretic. Who are left, except father-in-law Waring and myself?"

"He can't control either of you!" said Eleanor, proudly.

"When it comes to that, Nell, we'll move into Canada and buy a farm."

"But can he hurt you, Phil—either of you?" she asked after a moment.

"I'd like to see him try it," Phil Goodrich declared.

And his wife thought, as she looked at him, that she would like to see Mr. Parr try it, too.

CHAPTER XX.

THE ARRAIGNMENT.

I

Looking backward, Hodder perceived that he had really come to the momentous decision of remaining at St. John's in the twilight of an evening when, on returning home from seeing Kate Marcy at Mr. Bentley's he had entered the darkened church. It was then that his mission had appeared to him as a vision. Every day, afterward, his sense and knowledge of this mission had grown stronger.

To his mind, not the least of the trials it was to impose upon him, and one which would have to be dealt with shortly, was a necessary talk with his assistant, McCrae. If their relationship had from the beginning been unusual and unsatisfactory, adjectives would seem to defy what it had become during the Summer. What did McCrae think of him? For Hodder had, it will be recalled, bidden his assistant good-by—and then had remained. At another brief interview, during which McCrae had betrayed no surprise, uttered no censure or comment, Hodder had announced his determination to remain in the city, and to take no part in the services. An announcement sufficiently astounding. During the months that followed, they had met, at rare intervals, exchanged casual greetings, and passed on. And yet Hodder had the feeling, more firmly planted than ever, that McCrae was awaiting, with an interest which might be called suspense, the culmination of the process going on within him.

Well, now that he had worked it out, now that he had reached his decision, it was incumbent upon him to tell his assistant what that decision was. Holder shrank from it as from an ordeal. His affection for the man, his admiration for McCrae's faithful, untiring and unrecognized services had deepened. He had a theory that McCrae really liked him—would even sympathize with his solution; yet he procrastinated. He was afraid to put his theory to the test. It was not that Holder feared that his own solution was not the right one, but that McCrae might not find it so; he was intensely concerned that it should also be McCrae's solution,—the answer, if one liked, to McCrae's mute and eternal questionings. He wished to have it a fruition for McCrae as well as for himself; since theoretically, at least, he had pierced the hard crust of his assistant's exterior, and conceived him beneath to be all suppressed fire. In short, Holder wished to go into battle side by side with McCrae. Therein lay his anxiety.

Another consideration troubled him—McCrae's family dependent on a rather meagre salary. His assistant, in sustaining him in the struggle he meant to enter, would be making even a greater sacrifice than himself. For Holder had no illusions, and knew that the odds against him were incalculable. Whatever, if defeated, his own future might be, McCrae's was still more problematical and tragic.

The situation, when it came, was even more difficult than Holder had imagined it, since McCrae was not a man to oil the wheels of conversation. In silence he followed the rector up the stairs and into his study, in silence he took the seat at the opposite side of the table. And Holder, as he hesitated over his opening, contemplated in no little perplexity and travail the gaunt and non-committal face before him.

KUBELIK GIVES RARE PROGRAM

Celebrated Violinist Admirably Assisted by Mme. Axman, Metropolitan Opera Soprano

The second of the Steinert series of six concerts was given at the Boston Opera House by Jan Kubelik, the celebrated violinist, assisted by Mme. Gladys Axman, soprano of the Metropolitan Opera House.

The program was as follows:

Concerto D minor.....Wieniawski
Mr. Kubelik.
Voi lo sap te, from "Cavalleria Rusticana".....Mascagni
The Green Pavilion.....Sterndale Bennett
The Star.....James H. Rogers
Summer-Time.....Ward Stevens
Mme. Axman.
Romance.....Beethoven
Praeludium (for violin alone).....Bach
Introduction et Rondo Cappriccioso.Saint-Saens
Mr. Kubelik.
Aria "Il est doux, il est bon," "Herodiade".....Massenet
Mme. Axman.
Spanish Dance.....Sarasate
Le Streghe (Witches' Dance).....Paganini
Mr. Kubelik.

A large and appreciative audience was present, and both artists were the recipients of enthusiastic applause. Both obliged with encores, although Mme. Axman, who is a granddaughter of the late A. Shuman, was more generous.

The maestro, who was heard in Boston last Autumn upon his return to return to the United States, was in excellent form, and his rare qualities as a virtuoso were admirably set forth by the selected program. In Bach's praeludium for violin alone, he displayed his remarkable dexterity at bowing, as well as in "Introduction et Rondo Cappriccioso." The "Spanish Dance" by Sarasate and Le Streghe (Witches' Dance), furnished opportunities for display, and he was equally the master of the violin in short pieces by Beethoven and Wieniawski.

Mme. Axman was particularly well received and was recalled again and again. Her rendition of the Aria "Il est doux, il est bon," from "Herodiade," was applauded for several minutes, and she was forced to sing two encores. Her voice was clear, powerful and melodious, with good enunciation but a tendency was evident at times to strain at high notes. It was displayed to good advantage in the short songs, "The Green Pavilion," "The Star" and "Summer-Time."

READY ON STATE INCOME TAX

Public Urged to File Returns Early; Offices Are Opened Throughout State

Irving L. Shaw, State income tax director, has urged the public to file their State income tax returns as early as possible, in order to prevent congestion and consequent delay in determining tax rates on real estate and tangible personal property.

Mr. Shaw pointed out that a year ago more than 60,000 pieces of mail and upwards of 50,000 returns were received over the public counters in the last three days of the filing period.

He has announced that the main office at No. 40 Court street is open for the receipt of returns from 9 a. m. to 1 p. m. daily and until noon on Saturday, with an efficient corps of officials and clerks on hand to assist the taxpayers.

For the benefit of those located in sections of the State that are not adjacent to the Boston offices, arrangements have been made for receiving returns at various localities on different dates during January and February.

This week the deputy assessors will be at the following places to receive returns and to assist taxpayers.

Monday—Gloucester, Board of Trade Building, 9 a. m. to 5 p. m.; Lawrence, Chamber of Commerce, 9 a. m. to 5 p. m.; Marblehead, Town Hall, 9 a. m. to 12 m.; Swampscott, Town Hall, 2 to 5 p. m.; Arlington, Town Hall, 9 a. m. to 5 p. m.; Somerville, City Hall, 9 a. m. to 5 p. m.; Winthrop, Town Hall, 7 to 9 p. m.; Revere, City Hall, 8 to 4:30 p. m.; Middleboro, Town Hall, 10 a. m. to 4 p. m.; Walpole, Town Hall, 10 a. m. to 4 p. m.; Southbridge, Town Hall, 11 a. m. to 4:30 p. m.; North Adams, City Hall, 10 a. m. to 4 p. m.; Holyoke, Aldermanic chambers, 9 a. m. to 4:30 p. m.

Tuesday—Beverly, City Hall, 9 a. m. to 5 p. m.; Lawrence, Chamber of Commerce, 9 a. m. to 5 p. m.; Lynn, City Hall, 9 a. m. to 5 p. m.; Marlboro, City Hall, 10 a. m. to 5 p. m.; Braintree, Town Hall, 10 a. m. to 4 p. m.; Hingham, Town Office, 10 a. m. to 4 p. m.; Attleboro, City Hall, 9:45 a. m. to 3:45 p. m.; Nantucket, Assessors' Office, 9 a. m. to 4 p. m.; Athol, National Bank, 10:30 a. m. to 3 p. m.; Northampton, City Hall, 9 a. m. to 4:30 p. m.; Great Barrington, Town Hall, 10 a. m. to 4 p. m.

Wednesday—Lynn, City Hall, 9 a. m. to 5 p. m.; Manchester, Town Hall, 1:45 to 5 p. m.; Ayer, Town Hall, 10:30 a. m. to 4 p. m.; Concord, Town Hall, 10 a. m. to 4:30 p. m.; Mansfield, Town Hall, 10 a. m. to 4 p. m.; Plymouth, Old Colony National Bank, 10 a. m. to 4 p. m.; Attleboro, City Hall, 9:45 a. m. to 3:45 p. m.; Tisbury, Marthas V'ineyard National Bank, 9 a. m. to 3 p. m.; Clinton, Municipal Building, 9 a. m. to 3 p. m.

LOUIS A. GRIMM'S FUNERAL TOMORROW

Funeral services for Louis A. Grimm, a well known resident of Roxbury, who died at the Massachusetts General Hospital of spinal meningitis Saturday, will be held tomorrow morning at All Saints' Church, Roxbury, at 9 o'clock.

Mr. Grimm was an ensign in the United States Naval Reserve during the war. He was thirty-two years old, the son of Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Grimm of No. 53 Beech Glen street, Roxbury; a member of Roxbury Post, No. 44, American Legion, and of the Knights of Columbus. He attended Boston College High School and Notre Dame University, Indiana.

CALLS BOSTON PRIMITIVE

Lives Too Much on Past Reputation, Says Dr. Montani, Army Music Instructor

"Boston is primitive," according to Professor Anthony Montani, development specialist in music in the U. S. army, who arrived in Boston a few days ago to boom harmony in music in New England camps.

"I read a short time ago in the paper that some one said Boston was conservative," he continued.

"That may be true, but my objection to Boston is its primitiveness.

"It is living too much upon its past reputation. Its streets are dirty, its buildings are poor specimens of architecture in many respects, and Bostonians are getting credit for much that they do not excel in.

"My idea of a city is that it should continue to improve and not try to boom its history in old buildings and sites.

"Of course, there will be much in Boston that we will always highly respect and reverence.

"But let Boston push modern ideas into its conservative state. This being slow to change and unable to come to a decision about new methods seems to me to be Boston's weakness.

"When you come to Boston you have a feeling that everything is settled. I don't know that this is true in every particular, but it strikes one who has not been here for several years."

101ST VETERANS TO MEET ON THURSDAY

January 13 is going to be a big night for the men of the 101st Infantry Regiment. A meeting will be held at 8 p. m. on that date at the Y. D. Club for the purpose of organizing the 101st Infantry Veterans' Association. All present and former members are cordially invited. Invitations have been sent to every man who sailed home from Brest with the outfit.

Colonel Edward L. Logan, former commander, will preside. He will tell all about his trip over the battlefields and the condition in which the Massachusetts commission, of which he was a member, found the cemeteries. A bang-up program has been arranged. Remember the date, Thursday, January 13, and remember also, that you don't have to be a member of the Y. D. Club to attend. Perpetuation of the fine traditions of the 101st Regiment is the aim. Do your bit.

POSTOFFICE CLERKS DENOUNCE NEW BILL

The new postoffice appropriation bill was criticised at the regular meeting of the Boston Local, National Federation of Postoffice Clerks. President John A. Kelley declared that the action of the House of Representatives in passing it without provisions to remedy the wage and other grievances of the clerks made "bitter Sunday reading." He said the only hope for relief lay in the Madden bill.

Americans and Russians Both Allow for Wilson

Secretary of Labor Wilson justifies his order deporting Ludwig C. A. K. Martens, the sole authorized representative of the Russians in the United States, upon the ground that his government is a conspiracy actively engaged in the attempt to overthrow the government of the United States.

Secretary Wilson's act is autocratic, small and mean; the statement on which it is based is ridiculous.

England lavishes all sorts of official favors, except invitations to Buckingham Palace, upon Leonid Krassin, the Bolshevist envoy, who is doing in England exactly what Martens attempted to do here.

On that day that Secretary Wilson wrote the monstrous official misstatement that Martens was here to overthrow the government of the United States, Krassin was being entertained in London by Sir Robert S. Horne, president of the Board of Trade, whose relation to the British government is more important than Secretary Wilson's relation to the United States government. Lloyd George has received and entertained Krassin. England wants trade. She welcomes Russian gold. The United States declines both.

It is unbelievable that Secretary Wilson is stating his own opinion or exercising his own judgment. It must be assumed that he is acting under the direction of the White House.

Nobody tries today to account for some of the policies of the President. No reasonable, sensible, logical mind CAN account for—

Mr. Wilson's reasons for dismissing Secretary Lansing;

Mr. Wilson's recommendation to Congress that America accept the Armenian mandate after his own commissioner, General Harboard, had reported that it would require a standing American army in Armenia and more than seven hundred million dollars;

Mr. Wilson's solemn statement to the Foreign Relations Committee that he did not know, until he reached Paris, of the existence of the secret treaties of France, Great Britain, Russia and Italy with Japan, although these treaties, which changed the entire savor of the Peace Conference, had been published by the Russian Soviet government when it seized and published the secret archives of Russia;

Mr. Wilson's declaration in his Fourteen Points that the people of Russia must be allowed to set up any kind of government they chose, and his acts in uniting with the imperialistic government of Europe to blockade Russia, starving her women and children, her aged and dying, denying them even medicine, because they refused to accept a military dictator chosen to rule over them by other governments;

Mr. Wilson's repudiation of his own solemn promises: He assured labor that the Lever act would not be used against workers, but only to control speculators in food or fuel. Then, at the first opportunity he ordered it used against miners who had struck for seventy cents a ton increase in wages, but he refused, and still refuses, to use the law against coal operators and speculators who have raised coal prices more than seven dollars a ton;

Mr. Wilson's veto of the joint resolution of Congress reviving the War Finance Corporation for the purpose, not of bestowing alms upon Europe, but only to facilitate the sale of products which Europe needs of which we have a surplus.

The judgment of Congress on this veto was shown by the Senate on Monday repassing the resolution over the President's veto by 53 to 5, only two Democrats voting to sustain President Wilson; and by the vote in the House Wednesday of 250 to 66, or 37 more than the two-thirds majority required to nullify Mr. Wilson's veto.

Russia sorely needs agricultural implements, machinery, electrical supplies, locomotives, cars and steel rails. She has gold to pay for them.

American factories supplying these implements are now working on part time, with tens of thousands of workmen out of employment for lack of orders.

Nothing is so democratic as trade, nothing so helpful to good understanding, good relations or world-prosperity. No one needs to know the politics or the religion of the butcher, the baker or the candlestick maker.

But the President has determined that as long as he is in power the United States shall not trade with Russia, just as he determined, autocratically, that Huerta, because he had offended Mr. Wilson, should not be President of Mexico and that Carranza should be.

The able men in Russia, and certainly Mr. Martens, probably understand the situation as Americans do, and do not blame the American people for the stupid, childish act of this administration, which we feel certain will be corrected very soon after the 4th of March.

Steward Houston Liberal to England, Canny About Bonus

Secretary of the Treasury Houston complained the other day that the payment of a bonus to our soldiers would seriously cripple our financial condition because it involved about two billion dollars.

To this the leader of the soldiers has replied that Mr. Houston was mistaken for it would cost little more than half that sum.

Whatever the truth may be, it is interesting to notice that Mr. Houston was not so nervous about our finances when a few days later in another message to Congress, he discussed the question of permitting Great Britain to extend the time in which she is to pay the interest on the huge debt that she owes us.

We are in a most distressing period of financial reaction and depression. Our agricultural interests are absolutely prostrate and hundreds of thousands of farmers stand today utterly ruined, and tens of thousands are facing ruin all because we had not money enough to give them credit so that they might hold their crop and weather the storm. Business houses have been closed by the hundreds all over the country because they could not get credit to continue their business.

The payment of the interest on so huge a debt by Great Britain when it is due would go a long way toward relieving our distress, but Mr. Houston, who finds it so distressing to think of paying the soldiers their bonus, finds no difficulty in proposing the extension of the British interest, even in these hard times.

The Midnight Visitor

By S. E. KISER

THE profiteer was snoring sweetly;
The silk pajamas that he wore
Were tailor-made, to fit him neatly—
He dreamed of getting millions more.
The one with whom he had been mated
Slept in her twin bed near his own;
The posts and rails were all gold-plated—
She gurgled in an undertone.

UPON the dresser jewels glistened,
A moonbeam having struck them there;
The burglar ceased to crawl, and listened,
Then crawled again, with greater care.
The profiteer kept on emitting
Such sounds as might have waked the dead,
And suddenly his wife was sitting
With one leg hanging out of bed.

UPON the jeweled doorknob lightly
The wary burglar laid his hand;
The moonbeam caused the diamonds brightly
To gleam upon the dressing stand.
The thousand-dollar clock kept ticking.
The profiteer still snored and dreamed;
His listening wife heard something clicking,
And covered up her leg and screamed.

THE profiteer asked, "What's the matter?"
The burglar stepped inside the door;
The lady's teeth began to chatter,
Her jeweled gun dropped on the floor.
"I've called," the burglar said, half-sobbing,
"To offer my respects to you,
Because you've added tone to robbing,"
And then politely he withdrew.

THE profiteer, in silks attired,
Turned over and remained serene;
His wife uncovered and inquired:
"What did that vulgar person mean?"

Letters to the Editor

Comment on the King's Speech

Editor Boston American,

Dear Sir—On reading the "King's speech," so-called, at the prorogation of the English Parliament I thought it regretable that the English ministry should put falsehood and hypocrisy into the mouth of the King. Referring to the so-called Home Rule Bill he is made to say that it is "the fruit of more than thirty years of ceaseless controversy." If this measure, in the passage of which not one representative of the great majority of the Irish people took part, be the fruit of the efforts for Irish self government, what was the measure passed and assented to by the King in 1914, and which never came into operation? Again the military pulls the string and the King is made to say, "I deplore the campaign of violence and outrage whereby a small section of MY subjects seek to sever Ireland from the empire." Now is it a "small section" who seek this result, or has it not been shown by election after election that the vast majority of the Irish people desire to establish a republic? The Home Rule Bill, to which the King refers, proposes to set up two puppet parliaments in Ireland, one for the six counties in the northeast of the island, and one for the remaining twenty-six counties, neither of which will have any considerable power. The setting up of a separate parliament for that portion of the country in which the Protestants are, perhaps, a little more than half the population, is plainly an attempt by an alien and unsympathetic government to perpetuate the existing differences between certain sections of the Irish people, which that government has ceaselessly labored to maintain and accentuated in the past. It is intended with a view to having a certain section of the population continue to look to a foreign nation for that protection and sustenance which should be afforded by a native government. It bids them look away from Ireland instead of coming to the conclusion, at which the mass of their fellow-countrymen have arrived, that they must "work out their own salvation," not "with fear and trembling," but with high courage, fortitude, endurance and patriotism.

Very respectfully,
JAMES H. ROCHE.

OF THE spasm.
CAUSING THE hiccup.
AND SO,
I AM compelled,
TO COME again.
WITH MY claims.
AND POINT out.
THAT HAVING hiccupped,
AT THE present writing.
FOR A period,
OF FORTY hours.
I FIND.
THAT WHILE I have lost,
IN SPEED,
AND AM doing only.
ABOUT FOUR hiccups.
TO THE minute.
THAT ALMOST invariably.
THE COUNT.
IS FIFTEEN seconds.
BETWEEN hiccups.
AND THAT the explosion.

WHAT CAN'T WOMEN DO WITH MEN?

By Damon Runyon.

Copyright, 1921, by the Star Company.

IT is a remarkable thing, when you come to think of it, what a woman can do with a man.

She can make a sober, industrious citizen out of a drunkard and a ne'er-do-well. She can make a drunkard and a no-account out of a sober and industrious citizen.

She can make a thief into an honest man, and an honest man into a thief. She can make a suicide out of a fellow who never had a thought of dying.

She can make a simpleton out of the wisest man in the world. She can make a profligate of a miser, and cause a spendthrift to start a savings account. A woman can do practically anything she desires with a man.

Mister man, however hard-boiled and impregnable you figure your mind and heart against feminine influences, don't fool yourself. Somewhere there is a woman who can make you hop through a hoop, if she so desires.

Adam, Caesar, Napoleon and all the rest of them fell. The man has not yet been born who has not at some time in his life been susceptible to the influence, good or bad, of a woman.

We marvel when we read of some apparently level-headed chap skipping with the company funds, or killing another man over a woman, but it is no more remarkable than when, because of a woman, a wicked fellow turns good.

When a man wants a certain woman he wants her beyond fear of life, or death, of prison walls, or humiliation, or disgrace. He wants her beyond love of ease and idleness, beyond power, and beyond all other human comanionship.

It is a remarkable thing, is it not, that a certain woman, who in general appearance is much like a million other women, should be so desirable to a man? A woman who may seem dowdy to you, a woman who may seem homely and have buck teeth and a poor figure—strange how that woman can be the apple of a man's eye!

There are more women in the world than there are men. There are enough women to give each man several, if the division could be arranged; yet out of all these women but one certain woman is desirable to one certain man, and for her he will commit crime and abandon friends and everything else.

The answer?

I do not know. It has been that way since the beginning of the world, and it will be that way until the finish. In view of her influence over man, every woman when she is born should be placed under heavy bond to use that influence only for good, and thus every man would be a fine citizen.

I used to know a fellow who made a lifelong study of women and the reaction of men toward women. He was a saloon keeper in a Southern town, and his saloon was something of a "joint." To be frank, it was a pretty tough place, take it from one angle and another.

The saloon keeper was a dour old fellow, a bachelor, and, as far as anybody knew, wholly without female associations and influences for a great many years. Women, such as they were, he permitted in his place, but he never more than nodded at any of them.

Year in and year out he stood behind his bar, serving the drinks, wiping the stretch of smooth mahogany with a cloth, watching the various groups and rarely saying anything. He never expressed any opinions, and never gave any indication that he was anything more than a stolid rum seller.

But he must have been making observations. One day they found his saloon closed and the furnishings wrecked and piled in a heap on the floor. The saloon keeper had disappeared, leaving behind no trace. I am not sure that he has been heard of to this day.

On the mirror of the back bar, in soap, was written in what was unmistakably the saloon keeper's hand, his terse summing up of his study of many years, and what he said was this:

"IT TAKES A MOTHER TWENTY YEARS TO MAKE A MAN OF HER SON, AND IT TAKES A WOMAN TWENTY MINUTES TO MAKE A DAMN FOOL OF HIM."

STARGAZERS CHECK UP POINTS OF NEW SUN

By Edgar Lucien Larkin

Director of Mt. Lowe Observatory.

NOVA CYGNI No. 3 means the third new sun that has been discovered in that constellation in the northern regions of the celestial sphere. Photographs are being secured on every clear night in astro-physical observatories.

When a new discovery of transcendent importance is made in the stellar structure, telegrams and circulars are sent to other observatories. The distributing centre for North America is the Harvard College Observatory, Cambridge, Mass. Here is the first sentence in H. C. O., Bulletin 729:

"A telegram from Professor Dyson, Astronomer Royal, dated August 21, 1920, announces the discovery by Astronomer Denning of a bright Nova. A later message from Lecointe gives its position: Right ascension, 19 hours 56 minutes 23.1 seconds, and north declination 53 degrees 24 minutes 27 seconds."

At 1 a. m. on the morning of September 6 I turned a great telescope upon this exact place in the sky of night and saw the new sun, glittering in the clear, pure mountain air. The light is white-tinged with red. At instant of discovery by Denning from the observatory in England its magnitude was 2.8.

The tireless celestial photographers of the Harvard College Observatory take photographs of the sky on every clear night, year in and year out. On August 9 Miss Leavitt secured a photograph with a small lens capable of photographing suns of magnitude as low as 9.6. But the new sun did not appear. Clouds prevented more photographing until August 19, when lo! the new sun had appeared and was of 4.8 magnitude. Next night, August 20, four negatives were secured, and it had grown much brighter and was of magnitude 3. On August 22 the brightness had reached 2.8, as observed at Harvard shortly after discovery in England. Later photographs and measures by photometers at Harvard showed that maximum magnitude was reached on August 22, of 1.9.

But all three measur ments fall far and away below the supreme importance of spectrum analysis revelations. Bulletin 729 says:

"Visual observations of its spectrum showed no bright lines."

This was on August 22. But Bulletin No. 730 reads:

"Spectrum of Novr. still in early stage. Only dark lines visible. Hydrogen lines displaced about six Angstroms toward violet. H and K lines sharp, not displaced."

August 24, No. 732 contains a telegram from Brussels which states that Astronomer Carrazco finds the spectrum of Nova Cygni on August 24 to contain a complete series of hydrogen absorption lines and early helium elements.

"More photographs of the spectrum of the Nova were obtained by Astronomer King of Harvard on the 23d, 24th and on the 26th, on which date it had changed to the characteristic Nova spectrum, with bright bands."

Those having books containing Kirchhoff's wondrous laws of spectroscopy that have already changed man's concept of the universe, can study out what these observations mean in detail.

First, "no bright lines." Thus the spectrum was continuous from long wave-lengths, the red, to short waves, violet. This shows that the sun was at terrific heat energy, for Law One is that all elements when heated to vivid incandescence project continuous spectra. Then the new sun was surrounded by gas at very high temperature.

But Law Two is that all elements when incandescent absorb the wave lengths they emit when incandescent. Thus the external gas increased enough during forty hours to absorb the fierce light from incandescent hydrogen as it issued from the sun's surface below. And the hydrogen dark absorption lines shifted toward the violet end. This shows that the hydrogen was coming toward the earth and also that part of the shifting was due to the approach of the Nova toward the earth, or our sun, and with it, the earth moving toward the Nova.

The "H and K" lines are those projected by incandescent calcium. But helium was seen. All helium known here on earth comes from the disruption of radium. But it is now seen in the spectroscope incandescent in a newly seen and immensely remote sun. Can it be that this helium came from long preceding radium? And is it possible that radium exploded the Nova?
